DiMag's Homer Beats Phils in 10th

32,600 See Yanks Win Again, 2-1, in World Series

New York Slugger Ends Hitless Streak With Mighty Blast Into Upper Stands

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 5. They tempted Joe DiMaggio once too often today, and in the tenth inning he burst out of his futility to beat the Phillies with a loud home run that won the second game of the World Series for the Yankees, 2 to 1.

Big DiMaggio, a sorry figure to that point with four consecutive pop-ups against the pitching of the Phillies' Robin Roberts, completely wiped out his own chagrin with a game-winning blast that streaked far into the upper deck of left center field.

It was the blow that disabused 32,660 Shibe Park fans of the notion that their Whiz Kids might square the series at one-all, and it tipped in Allie Reynolds' favor the pitching duel he fought with Roberts.

Bad Hop Helps Phils

It was 1-1 when DiMaggio moved up to bat at the start of the tenth and only the fact that the Phillies had been blessed by a bad hop in the fifth inning deprived Reynolds of a 1-0 victory.

Yet the presence of DiMaggio at the plate appeared to be no immediate threat to the Phillies. Not only was he hitless in the series, but in two games he had been the biggest push-over in the Yankee lineup for Philly pitching. They had handcuffed him, watched him pop up six times in two days.

This time, though, it was different. There was ferocity in DiMag's swing when young Roberts pitched him a slider, a bit inside. It was a whole lot faster going than coming, and in a twinkling a fan in the upper deck had a memento of the 1950 World Series, and DiMaggio had his finest hour. It was his seventh home run of his World Series career.

Philly Fans Can Cheer

DiMaggio not only won the game but perhaps he also saved it, back in the sixth. In a throwback to the style that once stamped him the greatest of center fielders, he scrambled back to the center-field fence for a last-stride catch that took a triple away from Del Ennis at the start of the inning.

For the first time in the series, Philly fans had a chance to cheer today. Young Roberts was threat-

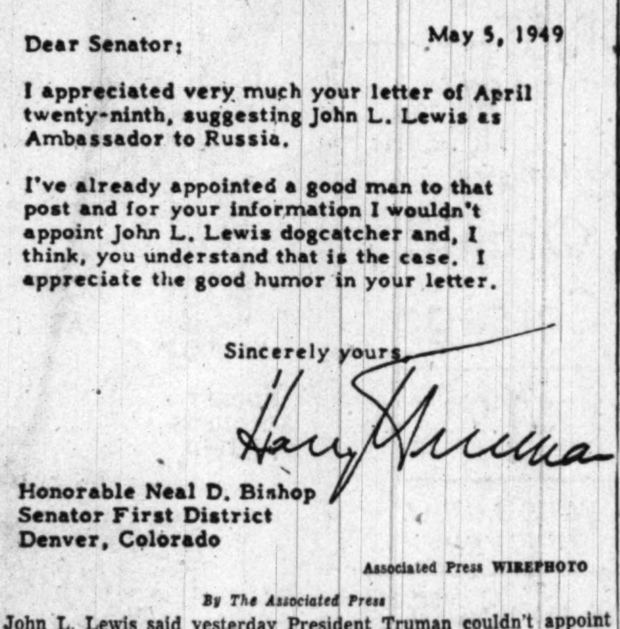
Lewis Says If He Led Dog Dept. It Would Top State in Brains



May 5, 1949

Dear Senator:

I appreciated very much your letter of April twenty-ninth, suggesting John L. Lewis as Ambassador to Russia.

I've already appointed a good man to that post and for your information I wouldn't appoint John L. Lewis dogcatcher and, I think, you understand that is the case. I appreciate the good humor in your letter.

Sincerely yours,

Harry Truman

Honorable Neal D. Bishop
Senator First District
Denver, Colorado

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

By The Associated Press

John L. Lewis said yesterday President Truman couldn't appoint him dogcatcher because he "could ill afford to have more brains in the Dog Department than in the Department of State."

And if he were dogcatcher, Lewis said, his first duty "would be to collect and impound the sad dogs, the intellectual poodle dogs and the pusillanimous pups which now infest our State Department."

Lewis, leader of the United Mine Workers, discoursed on his qualifications for dogcatcher in a letter to State Senator Neal Bishop of California. He gave copies to reporters.

In Denver, Bishop had disclosed Wednesday that President Truman wrote him a letter in 1949 saying that "I wouldn't appoint John L. Lewis dogcatcher."

Bishop, an old friend of the President, had written him a facetious suggestion that Lewis be appointed Ambassador to Russia

Lewis began his letter with an indirect reference to the President's other letter which recently got into the news—the one in which Mr. Truman called the Marine Corps the "Navy's police force" and said it had a "propaganda machine" almost the equal of Stalin's. Mr. Truman later apologized in effect to the Marines, saying his choice of language was "unfortunate."

Lewis' letter to Bishop:

"Conceivably it is true that the President's choice of words was again unfortunate. One could, however, persuade oneself that he was thinking only in terms of problems of state, and had no intent to belittle or sneer gratuitously at a private citizen. Assuredly, the President of the United States would not permit his personal feelings to sway his judgment on appointments to public office.

"Presidential appointment to the office of dogcatcher would postulate creation of a new Federal bureau with its accompanying personnel of thousands of employes and, in consequence, an increase to the tax burden.

"Naturally, the first duty of the Bureau of the Dog, if staffed by the undersigned, would be to collect and impound the sad dogs, the intellectual poodle dogs and the pusillanimous pups which now infest our State Department. This would be gravely disturbing and would perhaps cause profound unrest throughout our national canine fraternity.

"The President could ill afford to have more brains in the Dog Department than in the Department of State, and, from this standpoint, his remarks to you are eminently justified."

Federal Personnel More Able Than Industry's, Ching Says

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

Man for man, Government personnel has "more competence" than that of private industry, Cyrus Ching, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service and himself a lifelong industrialist, declared here yesterday.

In an incisive defense of Government workers, Ching took exception to the fashion of using "bureaucrat" as an insult.

If you took a cross section of a hundred persons in industry and a hundred in Government you would find those in Government more competent, he affirmed.

Of the 200 Government commissioners of conciliation, he illustrated, "150 of them could make far more money in industry.

"But they stay in Government. When you ask them why, they say: 'I feel I can contribute more to the good of the country by working for the Government.' "

In response to a question, he said he had career workers in mind when speaking of the competence of Government employes.

Ching addressed a luncheon of the Lutheran Laymen's Fellowship at the Ambassador Hotel.

"We hear all the time," he said, taking up his defense of Government workers, "that down in Washington, it's a madhouse, that the Government is full of bureaucrats and politicians.

"Of course the Government is full of bureaucrats and politicians. That's our system of Government."

Guard Units Will Resume State Status

Conversion Process Planned by Summer; Divisions to Become Regular Army Outfits

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Plans have been drafted at the Pentagon for the conversion of mobilized National Guard divisions into Regular Army divisions and the release of the Guardsmen to State status probably next summer.

The program, which is said to have the general indorsement of Guardsmen as well as the Army General Staff, would accomplish two major purposes.

It would permit the Guard divisions and other units to be returned home after only 12 to 15 months training at a time when they still could be relied on as an effective M-day fighting team, ready for an emergency.

Secondly it would make possible the creation of new Regular Army divisions required under the expansion program in a more efficient manner than simply starting from scratch.

The plan for releasing the Guardsmen, of course, is dependent upon the international situation at the time. One problem it is designed to solve is the following.

Unlike draftees, who are required to serve 21 months, the Guardsmen have been called for an indefinite period. From purely a military point of view, one trouble about holding such units in for two, three or four years, if necessary, is that the units would largely disintegrate when released from Federal service.

Here's how the plan would work, as outlined to The Washington Post by a top Army General Staff officer:

1. National Guard Division X, recently called into active service, is beginning its training. fresh from basic training.

2. The division's veteran officers and noncoms will whip the unit into a combat team during coming months, making soldiers of the newcomers and gaining proficiency themselves.

3. At the proper time, perhaps late next summer, the conversion process will begin. One battalion or perhaps a regiment will be "phased out" first. Some of the draftees and volunteers with time

U. N. Debate On Status of Formosa Voted

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Oct. 5 (U.P.).—The United Nations' powerful steering committee today overrode a strange Soviet-Chinese Nationalist combination and recommended that the General Assembly seek to settle the future of Formosa.

The American proposal was opposed by both Soviet Delegate Jacob A. Malik and Nationalist Delegate Dr. Tingfu F. Tsiang on grounds that Formosa belongs to China. Malik meant Communist China, and Tsiang had in mind his own regime, which retreated to the island redoubt when the Communists overran the mainland.

The vote recommending Assembly debate of the ticklish Formosan problem was 10 to 3. Czechoslovakia joined Russia and China in the negative. The decision is expected to be ratified by the full Assembly at Flushing Friday.

The day's other main development was Yugoslavia's apparent swing toward closer alignment with the West on key world issues.

The swing was indicated by:

1. Yugoslavia voted with the Western majority in tentatively approving budget estimates for the new Korean commission that will have the task of supervising

'Permanent' Shoreham Guests Evicted to Admit Transients

In a move that reportedly is forcing even Congressmen to seek other quarters, the Shoreham Hotel is converting apartments and "permanent" rooms into transient space, it was disclosed last night.

A "deluge of complaints" from permanent residents who were asked to vacate so their apartments may be converted into transient rooms has been received by Robert F. Cogswell, Rent Control Administrator, he revealed last night.

At the same time other swank hotels here confirmed reports they were raising rents of permanent guests as much as 25 percent since permanent space in transient hotels was decontrolled by Congress on June 30.

A few complaints about these increases have been received from permanent tenants of the Mayflower and Wardman Park Hotels, and "several" from tenants of the Hotel 2400, Cogswell said.

Some of the Shoreham tenants, Cogswell said, protested that giving them only 30 days' notice to move from quarters where they had lived "15 to 18 years" was "a pretty hard way to treat people."

Bernard R. Bralove, Shoreham vice president, was unable to verify whether any of the several members of Congress who stay at the hotel had been asked to move.

But Frank E. Weakly, president of the equally swank Wardman Park, said some Congressmen, asked to vacate at the Shoreham, had inquired if he could take them as permanent guests.

Cogswell said he understood some of the Shoreham tenants had elected to stay on at the daily rate.

"I was told through the grapevine," explained Cogswell, "that this rate was much higher than the permanent rate."

Declaring that the law required only 30 days' notice, Bralove said that permanent tenants who requested more time—such as 45 or 60 days—to find other quarters—were being allowed to stay on at the old rate. Those wanting to stay on permanently were being charged the daily rate, he said.

The two main sections involved at the Shoreham, said Bralove, are the so-called "crotch apartments," those situated in a corner being remodeled into transient rooms, and rooms in the F wing, which are being converted to transient use.

"We have been under considerable pressure from Congress and the State Department," declared Bralove, "to provide more space for transients."

C. J. Mack, manager, said the Mayflower has effected increases of 10 to 25 percent for its some 250 permanent tenants effective in September, and that "only one or two" had chosen to move rather than pay the increase. No one has been asked to leave, he said.

Weakly declared "there's not a vestige of truth" in the report the Wardman Park is evicting its approximately 1000 permanent guests.

The hotel has directed increases effective November 1, he said, ranging from 4 to 15 percent except for "two or three" tenants who refused to go along with a voluntary 12-percent increase a couple of years ago. In these cases, he said, the 12 percent has been added to the current increase.

G. C. Boone, manager, said the Hotel 2400, has notified tenants of upcoming 10 to 15 percent increases. None of the 33 has been evicted, he said, and none is expected to move.

5 Scientific Groups Prepare 'Dignified' Deferment Plan

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Five committees of scientific and professional leaders yesterday joined forces to recommend a draft deferment plan "for essential people on a dignified basis."

The plan was presented to Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service, who has been calling for a "tough" policy on deferment of scientists and professional men in the 19-to-26 draft age group.

Details of the plan will be made public this morning, when General Hershey addresses a Nationwide conference of educators at the United States Chamber of Commerce auditorium. Then the draft chief is expected to disclose how far he intends to go along with the recommendations of the five committees.

Meanwhile, W. Stuart Symington, mobilization coordinator, speaking before a conference of mayors here, indicated that he disagreed with General Hershey's "tough" deferment attitude on scientific and professional men. He said he would seek to work out "an over-all agreed policy" on use of the Nation's manpower, beginning with a luncheon meeting today with Defense Secretary George Marshall and Labor Secretary Maurice Tobin.

General Hershey last night continued his demand for a "tough" deferment policy in a radio interview with CBS Commentator Charles Collingwood. He said that we ought to maintain "a much tougher policy on deferment" in the 19-to-26 draft age group because there is an available supply of scientific men and professional men above the age of 26.

The general declared there was no question but that some young scientists and professional men had to be given deferment to provide technicians for the future, but that there was a question as to whether any individual scientific student actually would turn out to be a scientist.

The draft director suggested a "service tax" of 30 months on all young American men. After six months' of basic training for all, it would be decided which youths must be spared from further service at the moment, in order to

Harriman Hits Stassen for Bid to Stalin

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Presidential Assistant W. Averell Harriman yesterday criticized Harold E. Stassen for asking Joseph Stalin for a personal conference in an effort "to stop the drift toward war."

Behind closed doors at a United States Conference of Mayors meeting at the Hotel Statler, Harriman declared such action by Stassen could only be interpreted by the Russians as a sign of American weakness.

One mayor told The Washington Post that Harriman said the Republican leader had done the United States "a real disservice."

Several mayors agreed he said the Soviets would never believe the whole thing wasn't cooked up by the Truman Administration.

Stassen on Wednesday announced he had written the Russian Premier, asking for the meeting. He said he did so as a person active in the American political party not now in power.

Harriman's remarks came as part of a general speech on the international situation, intended as background for the Nation's mayors meeting here to consider civil defense problems. Harriman is President Truman's special assistant for foreign affairs and is a former Ambassador to the Soviet Union.

He told the mayors that the language of military strength is the only one the Russians understand. It was in that context, The Washington Post was told, that he criticized the Stassen proposal as leading the Russians to think it a sign of American weakness.

Floating Mine Sinks U. S. Ship Off Korea; 21 Missing, 12 Saved

The 136-foot American mine sweeper Magpie was officially listed yesterday as sunk by a floating mine off South Korea with 21 men missing.

The Navy said 12 survivors were picked up a sister ship and taken to Pusan, South Korea.

The Magpie was the third U. S. ship to hit a mine in Korean waters where new Russian-made floating mines have been identified.

Such mines are outlawed under the International Hague Convention because of the danger of their drifting into ships of neutral nations.

The Navy said the Magpie, a wooden-hulled craft, struck the mine on her starboard side on Sunday and sank about two miles off shore near the city of Ch'uksan-Dong. This town is about 90 miles south of the thirty-eighth parallel. The Japanese, when they occupied Korea, called the town Chusan-do. The Magpie's commanding officer, Lieut. Warren P. Person, of Pacific Grove, Calif., was listed among the missing.

In earlier incidents, the U. S. destroyers Brush and Mansfield were damaged by colliding with mines. After emergency repairs, both ships made port in Japan.

Eleven men were killed, 10 injured and three missing in the explosion that tore a hole in the bottom of the Brush on September 27.

Foe Forming Defense Line; Fliers Smash Red Convoys

Republicans Win Fight Above Parallel; Now Within 50 Miles Of Wonsan, Key City

TOKYO (Friday), Oct. 6 (AP). United Nations troops massed today along the North Korean border while planes attacked Korean Reds giving every sign of determination to continue the war.

The planes tore at convoys totalling more than 130 vehicles.

A dispatch from U. S. Eighth Army headquarters said U. S. Marines and infantry, British, Australian and South Korean troops have been building up along the thirty-eighth parallel for the past week.

Thursday British and Australian troops were flown by planes to new, advanced positions near the thirty-eighth.

U. N. forces available for an all-out push are estimated to total 175,000 or more.

In night-long attacks Thursday, planes of the U. S. Fifth Air Force smashed two large-scale North Korean efforts to move ammunition and eqipment to Communist units setting up a defense line north of the thirty-eighth. That parallel is the artificial boundary which has divided south and north Korea since the end of World War II.

Information from returning pilots substantiated reports that the Reds are ignoring General MacArthur's surrender demands and intend to attempt an organized stand in North Korea after defeat in the south.

Pilots said one convoy of between 40 and 50 vehicles was broken up while moving south from Sariwon toward Chaeryong. Those towns are 35 and 45 miles south of the Red capital of Pyongyang.

Another convoy was attacked as it moved east from Pyongyang toward Wonsan, industrial city on the east coast.

South Korean Third Division troops, battling more than 60 miles inside North Korea up the east-coast road, are within 50 air miles of Wonsan. Pilots estimated this second convoy had between 50 and 60 vehicles.

Other planes spotted a group of about 35 vehicles 40 miles north of Pyongyang at Anju. The planes lighted the group with flares, then swept low in bombing and machine-gun attacks. Pilots reported "excellent" results.

In all-night operations, the pilots

25,000 Massacred By Reds in Korea

By Relman Morin

TOKYO (Friday), Oct. 6 (AP).—Responsible American sources estimated today that 25,000 men, women and children have been massacred in South Korea by retreating North Korean Reds.

These sources, who are investigating the crimes, said this was only a guess.

"The reason is," one source explained, "that we are finding graves, big and small, in practically every village and town. There are a great many not yet investigated."

Partial figures, compiled from official American and South Korean sources, ranged from a minimum of 20,000 to a maximum of more than 22,000.

There are at least 20 cases yet to be checked, investigators said.

Some of the victims were American soldiers taken prisoner by the Communist army. The total of these is not known.

In stunned silence, the United Nations Commission on Korea heard first-hand reports from its field observers on atrocity slayings by the Reds.

The field observers' reports were read at Pusan Wednesday by Graham Lucas, the commission's acting deputy principal secretary.

The commission then messaged a preliminary report on the atrocities to U. N. Secretary-General Trygve Lie at Lake Success.

"First-hand information has been obtained by the commission's field observers of the murder of civilians and prisoners of war despite assurances of the North Korean authorities that the latter would be treated in accordance with the principles of the Geneva conventions," the commission told Lie.

"Additional evidence is currently gathered to indicate that the atrocities have been committed on a large scale in areas formerly occupied by the North Korean authorities. These atrocities involve in some cases the brutal beating and mutilating of persons prior to being murdered."

The commission said its observers viewed more than 800 bodies of slain South Koreans in Taejon "and more were being exhumed at the time the scenes of atrocities were inspected."

"The commission condemns the complete disregard by the North Korean authorities of civilized standards of behavior as well as of the principle of the Geneva conventions despite assurances to the contrary."

When they had time, the Reds covered the evidence of their atrocities with earth. When they were hurried, they left many bodies of their victims sprawled in open ditches or in exposed mounds.

Mass graves, large and small, are being found daily in South Korean communities along the bloody Red retreat trail. Some have not yet been opened by American officers probing the slayings.

South Koreans told the officers the atrocity victims died because they were opposed to communism.

Partial figures, compiled to date from official sources, gave the following estimated totals:

Seoul area, 10,000 and possibly more; Taejon, between 5000 and 6000 including some Americans; Wonju, between 1000 and 2000 including some Americans; Chinju, 12 American soldiers; Yosu, 200; Chongju, 2400; Suchon, 280; Yangpyong, 700; Mokpo, 500.

The American investigating officers said they expect to find "450 to 500 in every fair-sized town" they check.

The war crimes investigators said between 20 and 30 other major cases have been reported but not yet checked. Also unchecked are uncounted cases of whole families in small villages being wiped out in a single night by Reds searching for food.

In one such case reported from Changhung, near Kunsan, Communist soldiers armed with bamboo spears last Monday impaled 82 men, women and children after they took the village food supply.

Red troops swooped down on Chongju, about 20 miles north of Taejon, September 26—after the town had been retaken by Allied forces—and burned to death 150 civilians and 18 captured American soldiers.

The slaughter took place within an hour after the Allied task force rolled through Chongju without knowing that the 18 captured Americans were there.

Chief South Korean victims of the Communists were city and village officials, policemen, civilians denounced as anti-Communists and civilians who refused to conform to Communist theories.

Some of the large-scale killings took place while Reds were solidly entrenched in a large part of South Korea. Survivors said these were to "punish" anti-Communists and to terrorize the entire population of - city into conforming.

In most cases, however, the slayings toko place as the last act of vengeful Reds pulling out before the advance of Allied troops.

D. C. Captain Says

Reds Burned 150 Koreans, 18 GIs Alive

CAPT. WESTBURG
. . . tells of Red atrocities

By Hal Boyle

UNITED STATES EIGHTH ARMY HEADQUARTERS, KOREA, Oct. 5 (AP)—A United States Army officer reported today that surprised Red guards hurriedly burned to death 150 South Korean civilians and 18 captured American soldiers in Chonju after a liberating American task force had passed through the town. Chongju is about 30 miles north of Taejon.

The story is told for the first time by Capt. Arthur Westburg, jr., 1206 10th st. nw., Washington, D. C.

[Captain Westburg, 29, was attached to the office of the assistant chief of staff, G-2, before being transferred to Japan in May. It was during this assignment that he met his wife, Mrs. Margaret B. Westburg, a civilian employe there.

[They were married just before Westburg left for Japan. A native of Los Angeles, Calif., he is a Purple Heart combat veteran of World War II. He left the Army in 1946 to begin an auto parts business in Los Angeles, but went back into uniform in 1949.]

The captain's story is typical of dozens of instances being discovered of mass atrocities by North Korean troops and Communist secret police during the collapse of their southern front. Westburg said the massacre occurred September 26.

On that day he was in a First Cavalry Division task force assigned to completing the breakthrough from Taeju by linking up with the Inchon-Seoul landing force. Speed was all important if large enemy units in the southwest were to be walled off from escape. The task force completed its mission by racing the final 102 miles in 21 hours to join up with American troops pushing south from Seoul.

"Chonju was just another town on our route," Westburg said. "We weren't meeting any rear resistance so we just kept rolling. We had no way of knowing, of course, that any of our men were being held there."

There was a lapse of an hour between the time the task force drove on and the arrival in Chonju of other First Cavalry troops. In that interval a small Red garrison that had prudently stayed under cover during the unexpected appearance of the tank-led task force decided to pull out.

"They were holding 150 civilian prisoners and 18 Americans in a prison in the town," said Westburg. "The Reds tied them and herded them into a wooden building and set it on fire. They may have shot them first. It's hard to tell, but it looks as if they were simply burned alive."

The face of the young captain, who commanded a front-line company that suffered heavy casualties hardened in bitter lines as he finished his story.

"If we had only known they were there," he said, "we might have saved them. They came so close to being freed—and killing them was so damned unnecessary."

Lies of Reds Panicked People Of Yangyang Upon Liberation

(This is the second of two stories on the first Iron Curtain town in Asia to be liberated.)

By William Jorden

YANGYANG, Korea, Oct. 5 (AP) Panic swept this North Korean town when word came that South Korean forces had crossed the thirty-eighth parallel and were coming to occupy Yangyang. There was good reason for fright.

Communist propaganda had told the people of Yangyang that South Korean soldiers put metal rings through the noses of captives and led them through the streets like cattle. The propaganda said women would be raped and mutilated.

Instead, the South Koreans arrived peacefully. There was no brutality. The South Koreans talked with the residents of Yangyang about the subject most important to every Korean—the unification of North and South Korea. Bloodlessly, Yangyang became the first Iron Curtain town in Asia to be liberated.

News of the border crossing reached Yangyang on Sunday, October 1. Immediately the 100-man North Korean army unit in Yangyang began packing. So did the political commisar and the security police.

Word spread quickly through the town of 10,000. Half the residents threw food and precious belongings into bundles, heaved them onto their backs, and took to the hills.

"Pretty soon," said one of them, 50-year-old Chai Byong Il, "we decided we had done nothing wrong and that we were being foolish. So we came back."

Chai told me how it was in Yangyang then. Soon the streets held their normal quota of white-clad civilians. Crudely-made paper flags of the Republic of Korea appeared on every store front, at every gate, in every child's hands.

The South Korean soldiers and the citizens of one-time Red Yangyang gathered in bunches and shared fruit, biscuits and talk of unification. There were almost as many flags of the Republic of Korea on display as there had been in villages and towns south of the thirty-eighth parallel.

As we talked, sitting on the floor of Chai's tiny room on a side street, Chai heard for the first time that the fight against North Korea was not started by South Korean aggressors or American "imperialists."

Chai thought a moment, looked uneasily around the little bare room, then whispered:

"We hate the Communist leaders who started this war. The sooner it is over, the better."

He said it as though he believed it, but couldn't be sure the Reds might not be back some day. Like the rest of Yangyang's people, Chai was beginning to speak his mind for the first time in years, even though he still spoke in whispers.

Two Arlington Soldiers Wounded

Lieut. Hogg

Sergt. Hodges

Two Arlington men were listed as wounded in the latest Defense Department casualty lists.

They are Staff Sergt. Lewis E. Hodges, jr., 26, of 2^45 S. Glebe rd., First Lieut. Cecil Hogg, 28, of 1101 15th st. S.

Hodges was wounded September 4 by a mortar shell explosion. He is the husband of Mrs. Shirley Hodges and has a 17-month-old daughter.

'Blew Him 40 Feet'

Mrs. Hodges said she was informed by letter that the explosion which injured her husband "blew him 40 feet." He suffered leg and shoulder injuries.

Hodges atended St. Charles Parochial School in Arlington.

He was drafted in 1943 and has served continuously since then. During World War II he served in Sicily and the Normandy invasion. He was later wounded in Germany, here he received his first Purple Heart.

When wounded he was serving with the Second Infantry Division.

Brother Also In Army

A brother, Corpl. Robert Hodges, is attached to the 84th Engineer Construction Battalion. Their father, Lewis E. Hodges, sr., was an Army enlisted man. Sergt. Hodges was born at Walter Reed Hospital.

Mrs. Hodges said her husband regards the Korean war as "tougher" than World War II.

Lieut. Hogg is the husband of Mrs. Marie C. Hogg, of 1101 15th st. S., Arlington.

A native of Cumberland, Ky., he has had 10 years Army service. During World War II, he was an enlisted man. He attended Officers Candidate School and graduated in 1947.

Since January, 1948, he has been overseas in the Pacific—first in Japan, then in Korea.

20,756 U. S. Casualties Through September 29

The Defense Department yesterday reported 20,756 casualties in the Korean war through September 29, including 2954 dead and 4143 missing.

The report was based on official notification of next of kin. It does not include all casualties through September 29 because of the time lag in verifying reports and notifying relatives.

The report listed 2954 deaths, including 2660 killed in action; 13,953 wounded, of whom 294 later died; 4143 missing, of whom 193 later returned to American lines, and 73 reported captured.

Red Guerillas Raid for Food; Ambush GIs

UNITED STATES EIGHTH ARMY IN KOREA, Oct. 5 (AP).—Remnants of three North Korean divisions, shattered by the United States Second Division's advance across the Naktong River, are continuing guerilla action against United Nations' troops in southwest Korea.

Cut off by the U. N. push to and across the thirty-eighth parallel, the Reds have degenerated into disorganized elements, raiding villages for food and staging small group ambushes against U. N. troops.

An American patrol moving southeast from Nonsan recently ran into a well prepared ambush. About 300 Reds hacked at the patrol with small arms and automatic weapons fire from three sides. A tank and infantry team drove ahead to rescue the patrol. The Americans killed 34 North Koreans.

In another instance, a 40-year-old Korean attempted to enter a division command post and was ordered away. When he had gone about 50 feet, his frame pack exploded, killing him instantly. A fragmentation grenade had been hidden in his bundle of grass.

Legless GI's Parents Face Loss of Home

BOSTON, Oct. 5 (U.P.).—Pfc. Robert Mullen, 19, who lost his two legs fighting in Korea, was en route home today—but his parents feared they will have no home for him.

Mrs. Michael E. Mullen said she, her husband their other son, Edward, 20, who has received his draft questionnaire, may be evicted from their South Boston apartment Wednesday.

She said she already has received two postponements and must appear in court Tuesday regarding another. Her landlord wants to renovate the apartment for a higher rental, she said.

Mrs. Mullen said she applied for admittance to a veterans' housing project last spring but was turned down "because they said Robert was not a veteran then."

"He hadn't seen any action," she said.

Robert has seen plenty of action since then as he wrote his parents from the hospital ship bearing him homeward. The youth, who was injured at Inchon, told them not to worry because his legs had been amputated.

"The best years of my life are ahead of me," he wrote.

Dickerson, Md., GI Reported Wounded

FREDERICK, Md., Oct. 5 (Special)—A Montgomery County soldier has been wounded for a second time in fighting in Korea, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Poole of Dickerson, have been advised.

Pfc. Harry Luther Poole, 25, was seriously wounded on September 14, a short time after he had returned to action with the First Division following treatment for less serious wounds suffered earlier in the war.

5 More Cotton Ports

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 5 (U.P.).—The New Orleans Cotton Exchange added five more port cities today as points of delivery for New Orleans cotton futures contracts. They are Mobile, Ala., Savannah, Ga., Charleston, S. C., Norfolk, Va., and New York.

WOUNDED IN NIGHT FIGHTING—Capt. Joel L. Roth, 25, (right) of Northampton, Pa., the first wounded doctor to reach Washington, and Pfc. Otto A. Private First Class Kropp is working out the weekly Washington Post football contest

N. Koreans Like Night Fighting—Not This GI

Also at the hospital, a victim of night fighting, is Capt. Joel L. Roth, 25, of Northampton, Pa., the first wounded doctor to reach Washington. Roth's left leg, arm and eye were injured in hand-grenade explosions.

"The North Koreans liked night fighting, especially when it was raining," said Kropp matter-of-factly.

"When the rain hit the leaves you couldn't hear them crawling. We always had the feeling that they might be creeping up on us."

Kropp, who was serving with the Twenty-fifth Infantry Division, Thirty-fifth Regiment, was wounded in mid-September about 30 miles from Masan in Southern Korea.'

Put In South Koreans

Out of 180 men in Kropp's unit there were only "15 old men" left, he said. "They were so low on men that they were putting South Koreans in."

There were about 40 of them dug in on a hilltop that night.

"I thought things were too quiet. It was about 11:30 p. m. when mortars and artillery let loose and then they brought infantry in on us.

"I heard some hollering and I asked my foxhole buddy what that was, and he said that was some gooks hollering at us."

As a result of the attack the men on the hill were cut off, and about 2:30 a. m. on the second morning began to withdraw on orders of the platoon leader.

Just as Kropp climbed out of his foxhole "a Gook opened up on us with a burp gun. I said to my buddy I know I am going to get hurt." Kropp was.

He crawled 30 to 40 yards through a ravine, then was taken to a first-aid station in a tank (because the road was under North Korean small-arms fire) to begin the trip home.

Kropp, who has been serving in the occupation army in Japan, had been in the lines almost continuously after his arrival about July 11.

Battalion Surgeon

Roth, who served as a hospital corpsman in the United States during World War II and joined the Medical Corps in 1948 following graduation from Temple University Medical School, was attached to the First Cavalry Division, Seventh Cavalry, as a battalion surgeon.

In Korea since the first of August, he was working in a battalion aid station near Waegwan on the night of September 6.

"Some North Koreans got through our lines, surrounded our aid station, and fired on us with small arms, machine guns and hand grenades. A couple grenades fell close by me . . .

"There was a lot of confusion in the dark. I limped a good ways down the road and then was evacuated by jeep ambulance."

Debt Service Voted

LA PAZ, Bolivia, Oct. 5 (U.P.).—Congress today voted 56 to 36 to resume the service of Bolivia's foreign debt, as of January 1, 1950.

Army Warned Of Korea War

TOKYO, Oct. 5 (U.P.).—The English-language daily Japan News said today that Maj. Gen. Charles Willoughby, head of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's intelligence section, warned the Army Department three months in advance that the Communists would invade South Korea.

"On March 10 he dispatched a message saying: 'Report received that People's Army will invade South Korea in June'," the paper said. "The invasion began on June 25."

Willoughby said the Japan News articles was "substantially true."

2 Republican Leaders Blame Administration

Two Republican leaders said yesterday disclosure of the Willoughby report provides new evidence of "bungling" and "incompetence" in the Truman Administration.

Guy G. Gabrielson, chairman of the Republican National Committee, said the report "serves to substantiate our contention that the present Administration is incompetent either to achieve peace of maintain an adequate dfense."

Senator John W. Bricker of Ohio said the report merely emphasizes that the Government "didn't give proper credence to its intelligence reports—either they were not properly analyzed or they were simply not believed."

claimed destruction of 29 trucks, 28 vehicles, three locomotives, 13 box cars and 63 or more military buildings.

Reds Told to Stand at Wonsan

Added evidence that the Reds intend to continue fighting came in a field dispatch from Associated Press Correspondent Bem Price, with South Korean troops in North Korea.

A captured North Korean officer was quoted as saying all recent Red army orders called for the Communists to make a stand at Wonsan.

"Some of the prisoners said they had heard that Russian advisers were designing the defenses around Wonsan," Price said.

Rugged infantry of the South Korean Third Division slashed through land mines and barbed wire into Changjon, a small coastal town 63 road miles north of the thirty-eighth parallel.

The advance was made in a day-long clash of artillery and small arms with Reds in battalion strength backed by a company of Red Marines—probably less than 1000 men all told.

Only South Koreans Across

Only South Korean troops—and only 20,000 of them—have thus far crossed north of the thirty-eighth parallel—the arbitrary line which for five years separated with an iron curtain the Communist northern regime from the Republican government in the south.

The South Korean Capital Division also was north of the parallel. It engaged a by-passed Communist force, estimated at about 1200, in the hills west of Hwangpo, 25 road miles north of the old boundary.

Stiffening resistance by the northerners—five days after General MacArthur's broadcast demand for their capitulation—bore out reconnaissance reports of Fifth Air Force pilots.

The Reds apparently were attempting to regroup on their old prewar defense line just north of the thirty-eighth parallel. It was from there that the Reds jumped off June 25 for their 11-point invasion of the south.

Ran From Haeju on West

The old fortified line ran from Haeju on the west coast to the Communist interior cities of Kumchon, Chorwon and Hwachon, a big hydro-electric power center.

Intelligence reports, however, indicated only three North Korean divisions were available to defend the Red homeland now.

The Reds had committed the vast bulk of their army to the invasion of the south, and lost it when the United Nations counteroffensive and the Inchon landings of September 15 snatched victory from them in one of warfare's quickest turnabouts.

Wonsan, a former industrial town noted for its Japanese-built complex of chemical plants, is another Communist strong point. It has been heavily bombed in recent months, however, and its industrial war potential has been destroyed.

Civilian refugees told Associated Press Correspondent William Jorden that the Reds were preparing dug-in positions west and north of Changjon to try to slow the advancing Republicans—who have slogged more than 270 miles in 17 days, largely afoot.

Lightning Strike Possible

As the Reds gave no sign of surrender, General MacArthur regrouped his forces still remaining below the thirty-eighth parallel, for what may become a lightning strike along all fronts to the Manchurian border.

Seven American divisions and five South Korean divisions in addition to the Third and Capital Divisions formed the bulk of the U. N. force. There were British and Australian brigades and a combat battalion of Philippine troops, totaling perhaps 10,000 more men also available for the northern thrust.

Authoritative sources at MacArthur's headquarters said these men, numbering fully 175,000, would be sent across the thirty-eighth paralel in force when strategic plans call for them to move.

Supporting them was a mighty Allied force of ships and warplanes, which in three months had grown comparable to World War II stiking forces. Both sea and air lanes have been under Allied domination from the start of the war.

Bombers Strike Arsenal

On Thursday, 40 B-29's hit Kan-Ni arsenal, 10 miles north of the Communist capital at Pyongyang, where some new activity was observed. The attack discouraged makeshift production in an undergound depot and factory.

B-29's also patrolled the highway routes north of Pyongyang where supply movements from the Manchurian border area have been noted in recent days. Other superforts dropped surrender leaflits on nine North Korean cities.

Fifth Air Force fighters and light bombers flew 100 sorties during the day, but found targets diminishing everywhere. Locomotives, box cars, railroad tunnels and one gun position north of Pyongyang were attacked with rockets and bombs.

While an air of expectancy ran through the liberated area of Korea, the liberated forces were engaged in small-scale mop-up actions and regrouping movements.

An Eighth Army communique said that as the result of rapid offensive action, some Allied units had been out of contact with their parent organizations. Communication lines now were being reestablished.

The majority of Communist forces south of the thirty-eighth parallel were described officially as "badly disorganized beyond any military value to the enemy."

The Eighth Army commander, Lieut. Gen. Walton H. Walker, said the Seoul-Taejon-Taegu road network was now securely in friendly hands.

However, guerilla actions were continued by remnants of three Red divisions cut off in southwest Korea.

The Communist Party newspaper Pravda in Moscow, while conceding a "terrible danger hangs over Korea," claimed that guerilla warfare was being stepped up. The Chinese Communist radio in Peiping also predicted that a terrible war of attrition would be fought from the hills by Red holdouts.

More than 25,000 Reds have surrendered, however, to South Korean and American troops since the war began. Latest reports showed that 4000 Reds had submitted to the South Korean First and Second Corps within the past few days.

The Eighth Army said that loudspeaker-equipped aircraft were prepared to broadcast surrender instructions to Red groups hiding in South Korea's rugged hills.

Enemy soldiers will be instructed to assemble in open spaces without weapons, vehicles or shelter and to signify their intention of surrendering by building a white cross on the ground.

These surrender methods were effectively used in World War II.

Efforts to speed-up surrender of Red units coincided with fresh reports of atrocities committed by disorganized Communist stragglers who have been raiding villages for food. Others have staged small group ambuscades.

Baruch Says 97% Of Handicapped Can Be Salvaged

Ninety-seven percent of the Nation's millions of handicapped persons can be rehabilitated for useful work if properly treated, said Bernard Baruch, writing the guest editorial in the current issue of the national journal, Life and Health.

Baruch advocated at least one well-equipped rehabilitation center for each major community.

Experience gained in Army, Navy and Air Corps hospitals during the war showed how much can be done at such centers in restoring disabled persons physically, mentally, socially and vocationally, he said.

The editorial was prepared to celebrate the current National Employ the Physically Handicapped Week.

Greece to Take Part In Defense Planning

By The Associated Press

Greece agreed today to join Turkey in linking its military defense planning to the Mediterranean strategy of the Atlantic treaty nations.

Greek Ambassador Athanase Politis informed the State Department in a note that his government accepted an invitation from the North Atlantic Treaty Council to take part in planning the defense of the Mediterranean.

This means that Greek and Turkish officials will join with British, French, Italian and Americans on a regional planning board concerned with the defense of the area. Turkey agreed to the same arrangement Wednesday, It does not give either country membership in hte North Atlantic Alliance.

The Greek note was in response to an invitation given verbally by Secretary of State Acheson in behalf of the North Atlantic Council.

Soviet Charges Plan For Annexing Albania

MOSCOW, Oct. 5 (AP).—The Soviet press claimed today great efforts are being made to weld a Mediterranean pact to include Greece, Turkey, Italy, and Yugoslavia and with annexation of Albania and a part of Bulgaria as its purpose.

Soviet writer Nikolai Virta declared in the Literary Gazette that treaty talks in Athens—reported in a dispatch to Izvestia. The government newspaper—are also aimed at including Austria and Egypt in the prospective alliance.

Virta said that in all Mediterranean "axis" plans, Marshal Tito is being given a leading role. He denounced the Yugoslav premier as "that most villainous of all the villains in the world."

Provocations on the Bulgarian and Albanian frontiers are following one another with great speed, the Soviet writer said. He declared that 1,000,000 Yugoslav citizens—the maximum mobilization potential of the nation—have been called into the army "equipped by President Truman."

In return for American arms aid, Virta wrote, Marshal Tito gave the United States Adriatic ports and airlines.

'Invaders' Out, Pakistan Says

KARACHI, Pakistan, Oct. 5 (AP). Pakistan's Defense Ministry declared tonight defending Pakistani troops have driven invaders from Afghanistan back across the border after six days of fighting.

(In New Delhi, Afghanistan's ambassador to India, Sardar Najib Allah Khan, denied Pakistan government charges and said the clashes in northern Pakistan involved only Pathan border tribesmen who are agitating for an independent state of Pushtoonistan.

(The ambassador said the Afghan government is "always prepared to settle the question (of Pushtoonistan) amicably, but there can be only one solution—uniting three billion Pathans in Pakistan with four billion tribesmen across the border into one united, independent Pushtoonistan." Until this is done, he said, the issue will continue a "dangerous and highly explosive powderkeg.") postwar election of a free and unified Korean government.

The new commission was provided for in yesterday's historic Political Committee vote approving a Western blueprint for Korea that would recognize the right of U. N. forces to roll across the thirty-eighth parallel. Final Assembly approval of the plan Friday or Saturday is a foregone conclusion.

2. Yugoslavia voted with the majority in approving an Australian proposal to condemn Hungary, Bulgaria and Romania for failing to comply with treaty arbitration procedures for handling charges that they violated human rights in the trials of Joseph Cardinal Mindszenty and other church and political leaders. In U. N. voting in the Balkan trial case last year, the former Cominform nation abstained. Today's vote in the special political committee was 39 in favor, the Soviet bloc against, and 13 abstentions. This was far more than the two thirds needed for final Assembly approval.

In the steering committee's Formosa debate, Russia and Nationalist China both argued that the Cairo and Potsdam agreements had stipulated that the island would be restored to China.

Parted Ways

But after agreeing on that, they parted ways.

Tsiang, arguing that Chiang Kai-shek's regime had final sovereignty over its island stronghold, said:

"It is, to say the least, unusual and entirely unprecedented in the U. N. for one member government to call into question the territorial possession of another member. . . . It is beyond the competence of the General Assembly to discuss a question of this kind."

Malik said the proposal to let the Assmebly decide Formosa's fate "is an insult to the great Chinese people, whose great struggle for national independence should stir the respect of the members on the U. N. The fact that Taiwan (Formosa) belongs to the Chinese People's Republic makes it a subject not suitable for discussion here.

"On January 5. 1959," Malik said, "the United States again confirmed that Taiwan belongs to China. But in his message to the Veterans of Foreign Wars, General (Douglas) MacArthur exposed the true intentions of the United States as MacArthur put it, it is an unsinkable aircraft carrier, facing the heart of the Asian continent.

"The American generals and admirals, headed by MacArthur, want to grab Taiwan from China in order to set up their own military bases."

Korea Upset Conditions

In answer, American Delegate Warren R. Austin said the conflicting claims of Russia and Nationalist China were "alone enough" to warrent an Assembly attempt to decide the island's future status.

But, more important, he said the Red Korean aggression of June 25 had "upset all conditions" in the Pacific and compelled President Truman to send the Seventh Fleet to protect Formosa. He recalled that Mr. Truman, at that time, said a decision on Formosa's future must await restoration of peace in the Pacific, a Japanese peace treaty or consideration by the U. N.

Other U. N. developments:

1. The steering committee recommended that the Assembly put on its agenda Russian charges of United States aggression against China and two Yugoslav proposals. One calls for automatic designation of a nation as an aggressor if it fails to cease-fire and pull out of enemy territory within three days. The other calls for a permanent U. N. good offices commission to mediate disputes.

2. MacArthur submitted his fifth regular report on the Korean fighting, but it was somewhat academic, since it covered only up to the day before the Inchon landing.

9 P.M. tonight is the deadline for this week's football contest entries. Leave your entry blank at the Service Counter in The Washington Post Building before that time.

Aim: Coordination

District Calls Area Talk on Civil Defense

The District Commissioners yesterday asked nearby county and State officials from Maryland and Virginia to meet with them October 17 for initial talks on coordinating civil-defense plans.

Invitations went to civil defense directors of both States and to the governing bodies of Montgomery, Prince Georges, Charles, Calvert and St. Marys counties in Maryland and of Arlington and Fairfax counties and the cities of Alexandria and Falls Church in Virginia.

Purpose of the meeting, the invitation stated, is "to agree on means for coordinating . . . local plans, and to assure that the support of the entire area is extended to any one of the communities which might suffer damage in an enemy attack."

The meeting is scheduled to be held in the office of Commissioner John Russell Young at 2 p. m.

The announcement came as mayors from the Nation's cities gathered here in special conference to consider civil defense. The District was represented by Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young and Police Inspector John E. Fondahl, acting civil defense boss.

The two-day meeting of the United States Conference of Mayors began with a talk by W. Stuart Symington, head of the National Security Resources Board which has done the Government planning on civil defense.

A second meeting today will include a business session and a closed Pentagon meeting with Secretary of Defense George C. Marshall.

Moves for U. N. Pact Against Reds Decried

CHICAGO, Oct. 5 (U.P.).—Halvard M. Lange, Norwegian minister of Foreign Affairs, today labeled "wholly unrealistic" any plans to transform the United Nations into a world-wide alliance against communism.

Important member countries whose support and friendly cooperation are needed by the U. N. "just would not go along" with such a proposal, Lange told a luncheon meeting sponsored by the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations.

Austria Asks Big 4 To Help Curb Reds

VIENNA, Oct. 5 (U.P.).—Austria appealed to the Big Four occupation powers tonight to help maintain order in the country as club-wielding Communists severed or blockaded most road and rail outlets between Vienna and the western zones. Allied traffic was not affected.

(A Foreign Office spokesman in London, said the North Atlantic pact's defense machinery would be set into operation in the event of an attack on Western occupation forces in Austria.)

The Austrian Cabinet accused the Russians of actively supporting Communist lawlessness and helping the Reds occupy a post-office and telephone building in the Soviet zone.

Fifty police were injured in clashes in Vienna, Wiener Neustadt, 30 miles to the South, and St. Poelten, 25 miles west of the capital. Twenty-two Communists were arrested in Vienna and 12 in Graz, in the British occupation zone.

The Communists called off a scheduled general strike because of what they described as "terror" in the Western zones. The action was considered an admission of defeat, however, because only active Communists obeyed the strike call.

Autos and streetcars were halted in the Soviet sector of Vienna as the Communists ripped up paving stones and piled rubble, trash and wet cement on the streets. They overturned three streetcars.

Most roads out of Vienna, including those used by the Americans and British to reach their airfields and their outside zones, were barricaded with stones and overturned vehicles. But Allied traffic was allowed past in every case.

The government appealed to the United States, Britain, France and Russia for "all support in maintaining order in our country."

No 'Fraction'

Reds Shorn Of Status in Bundestag

BONN, Oct. 5 (NYHT).—In 10 minutes of parliamentary last rites, the Communist Party today was shorn of its status as a 'fraction" in the West German Bundestag, losing its rights to participate in committee work or introduce legislative motions.

The Communists managed to seat 15 members in the Bundestag in the general election of August, 1949. This total has been whittled down by party purges and by suspensions for infraction of Bundestag rules until today only eight have the right to attend sessions.

Under Bundestag rules no party with fewer than 10 members is allowed the normal "fraction" status, which includes office space in the capitol. All others rate as "independents" and must take their chances—which are very slim—in making themselves heard in debate.

Bundestag Probe Voted In Charges of Bribery

BONN, Oct. 5 (AP).—An official Bundestag investigation of press charges that nearly half the members of the West German Parliament have taken bribes was voted today.

A German weekly news magazine charged that two million Deutsche marks ($476,000) had been paid to deputies by lobbyists to influence the vote on the seat of the capital.

The secret vote a year ago settled the rival claims of Frankfurt and Bonn in favor of the latter.

Algerians, Viet Minh Reds Clash

SAIGON, Indo-China, Oct. 5 (U.P.).—French military headquarters reported today that at least 250 Viet Minh rebels were killed in a swampland battle with a battalion of Algerian light infantrymen near Caugan, 75 miles south of Saigon.

A military spokesman said the battle started late yesterday when a strong force of Communists staged a surprise attack on the Algerians from four sides in a riceland area.

French artillery and planes were summoned by radio and they drove the Reds back by nightfall, according to the spokesman.

In Saigon, a native woman who carried explosives in her luggage was reported responsible for a mystery blast that killed five crew members of the French warship Amyot Dinville off the Indo-China east coast last week.

Twenty others were injured. The dead included the ship's captain. French officials here declined to comment on the reports, which said the woman went aboard under the guise of a "passenger," and sacrificed her own life in setting off the explosion between decks.

Meanwhile French air and ground forces pounded Communist battalions in the mountains near Donghke to protect a column of troops retreating southward through the rocky no-man's-land after withdrawing from the Chinese border fortress of Caobang.

11 Czechs Go on Trial for Trying to Flee Country

PRAGUE, Oct. 5 (U.P.).—Four former employes of the American Embassy in Prague and seven members of Czechoslovakia's world champion hockey team went on trial today charged with trying to flee the country.

The former United States Embassy employes, all Czechs, were accused of trying to leave the country last July after they were released from their jobs because of a general personnel reduction ordered by the Czech government.

The hockey players were charged with "slandering the republic," planning to escape the country and assaulting state policemen. The fight was reported to have started after the hockey players criticized the government bitterly for refusing to send the team to London to defend its world title against Norway.

Martin S. Bowe, 32, Holyoke, Mass., United States military permit officer in Prague, was named in the trial of the hockey players as having promised them aid if they managed to get out of the country. Other American officials were expected to be "implicated" by the four former embassy staffers.

Unionists Overwhelmingly Support Bevin

MARGATE, England, Oct. 5 (NYHT).—Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin called on the North Koreans to surrender today and let the United Nations settle the Korean problem and help in the reconstruction of the war-shattered country.

Bevin made his appeal during a lengthy review of his handling of British foreign policy before the 1500 delegates to the British Labor Party's annual conference.

There were several critics of his policy. But at the end of his somewhat emotional but impressive argument, he won an overwhelming vote of approval. The delegates, representing more than five million British Laborites, voted 4,861,000 to 881,000 to reject a resolution criticizing his policy.

Bevin gave a rambling and often fervent account of his patient but frustrating attempts to achieve agreement with Russia on the problems of the post-war world. But at every stage, he said, he was met by obstructionist tactics, aggression or threats of aggression.

Nevertheless, he said, he was still willing to forget the past and meet the Russians, but, he added, "We have the right to be treated as honest people."

A moment later, he virtually turned down the idea of a Big Five conference on the ground he does not believe in a few big powers trying to settle the affairs of small nations. He preferred to use the United Nations machinery.

Bevin denounced some of his critics who had suggested that the United States is a potential aggressor nation with which Britain should not be too closely associated.

"I don't believe the United States will ever be aggressors," he said. "There is no sign, there is not an atom in their policy that justifies that claim."

Soviet Fear Of Balkan Union Cited

BEL[illegible]E, Oct. 5 (U.P.).—The Yugoslav Communist Party, on the third anniversary of the founding of the Cominform, indicated today that Yugoslavia's desire for a South Slav federation was the real reason for Russia's violent attack upon this country.

Throwing new light on events leading up to the historic break between Yugoslav Premier Marshal Tito and Soviet Premier Josef Stalin in June, 1948, the party printed a 50-page article containing many previously unpublished letters from Tito to high Communist leaders.

The article stressed that Tito's attempt to unite Yugoslavia in federation with Bulgaria met with the Kremlin's extreme displeasure.

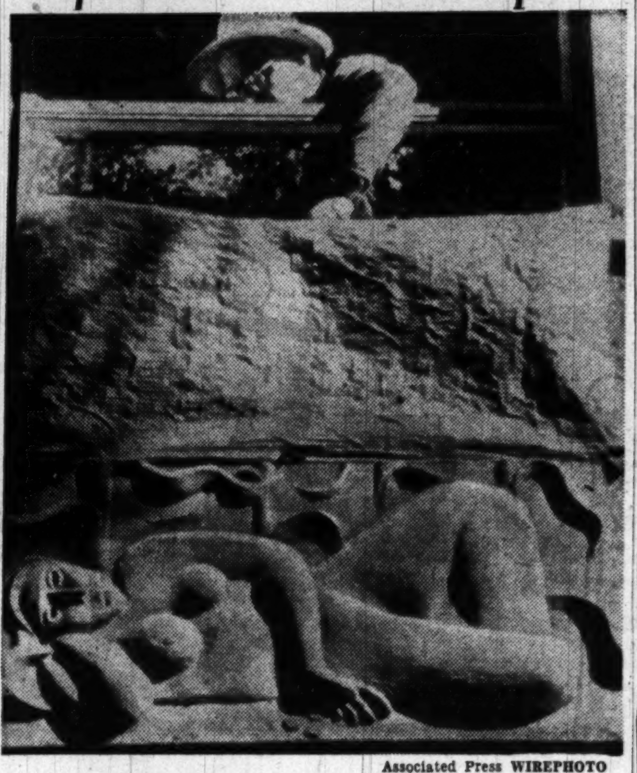
It said Yugoslavia still favors union with Bulgaria on a confederate principle, and that such a South Slav unity was the first step toward a Balkan federation, including Albania, Romania and Greece.

It reviewed the negotiations between Bulgaria and Yugoslavia from 1944 to 1948, saying Russia held up their logical culmination when Britain protested the proposed federation in February, 1945, to both the Bulgarian and Soviet governments.

Veteran observers here always have insisted that the Belgrade-Moscow rift emanated from Soviet fear of an independent Tito at the head of a Balkan federation bordering on the Soviet Union.

The article lavishly praised the late Bulgarian Premier Georgi Dimitrov. It said he and Tito continued to lay groundwork for the union until the Soviet Communist organ Pravda denounced the idea on February, 1948—a month before an exchange of letters between the Soviet and Yugoslav Communist Parties that ended in Tito's expulsion June 28, 1948, from the Cominform.

Disputed Art Under Wraps



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

"MISS FERTILITY"—The latest center of controversy in Santa Fe, N. Mex., art circles, where such disputes are many, is this bas relief of "Miss Fertility," so dubbed by newsmen. The Rev. Robert J. Brown, Baptist minister, and others protested after the nude figure was set in a wall of a new Statehouse addition. Artist William Longley and his backers insisted the panel was merely "good art." An unidentified man pulls back a canvas drape that Gov. T. J. Mabry ordered to cover the artwork until the issue is settled

OEEC Leaders Meet in Paris

PARIS, Oct. 5 (NYHT).—The economic leaders of the 18 Marshall Plan countries will meet in Paris Friday for the first top-level meeting of the Organization for European Economic Cooperation since western Europe became faced with the need to divert some of its resources to arms production.

The Finance and Foreign Ministers are expected to discuss steps to suppress inflation. The agenda includes also the question of further liberalization of trade within Europe and consideration of various plans for closer European integration.

NLRB, With New General Counsel Agreeing, Adopts Policy Ending Dispute on Authority

The National Labor Relations Board yesterday ended a three-year deadlock with its general counsel over the scope of the agency's operations under the Taft-Hartley Act.

Seven clear-cut areas were staked out in which the board would accept jurisdiction, and an NLRB spokesman told a news conference that George J. Bott, new general counsel, concurred in the policy.

That meant an end to the bickering which had taken place for three years—since the Taft-Hartley Act became effective—between the five-man board and former General Counsel Robert N. Denham, who was ousted by President Truman on September 18.

Generally, Denham had insisted the board lacked authority to determine what cases it would handle because the law said any enterprise which affected interstate commerce fell within the board's jurisdiction. The board contended that it can decide what kind of cases affecting commerce it should handle.

In the long run, such a policy by the board would be futile unless the general counsel agreed. He has authority to determine what kind of unfair practice complaints to press and what kind to dismiss.

In yesterday's announcement the board said that because of the mobilization program, it would take jurisdiction over any establishment "substantially affecting national defense."

The six other areas in which it will assume jurisdiction are:

1. Any "instrumentality or channel" of interstate and foreign commerce, such as a radio station, whether part of a network or not.

2. All public utility and transit systems.

3. Establishments which operate as parts of an interstate enterprise, such as chain stores and branches of national or interstate organizations.

4. Enterprises producing or handling goods or services for out-of-state shipment valued at $25,000 or more a year.

4: Enterprises which annually furnish $50,000 worth of services or materials necessary to the operation of enterprises falling into categories 1, 2 or 4.

6. Any other enterprise which has:

(a) A direct inflow from out of State, of material valued at $500,000 a year.

(b) An indirect inflow of material valued at $1,000,000 a year.

(c) A combination inflow or outflow of goods which add up to at least 100 percent of the amounts required points 4, 5 and 6.

To Total Up Business

The last yardstick was complicated but it was explained that the amount of business done by firms in interstate commerce would be added up. If the total came to 50 percent of the inflow requirement and 50 percent of the outflow requirement a firm would be subject to NLRB jurisdiction.

As a further indication of harmony at the NLRB, it was announced that Anthony Sabella, who had been named by Denham as officer in charge of the Memphis, Tenn., sub-regional office, was approved by the board. The board previously had challenged Denham's right to make the appointment.

London Gas Strikers Vote Return Monday

LONDON, Oct. 5 (NYHT).—Gas workers in 17 North London plants voted to return to work today a few hours after 10 of their leaders had been sentenced to one-month imprisonment for their part in the 21-day unofficial strike. The approximately 1500 strikers will go back to work Monday.

Labor Government leaders moved against the strike leaders through the courts, principally to present Communist trade union agitators with an object lesson. But they may find that the prosecutions will boomerang.

Shortly after the strikers voted to call it off today, Claude Berridge, London district organizer of the Confederation of Shipbuilding and Engineering Unions, announced that a trade union defense committee would be set up shortly to work for the repeal of the regulation under which the 10 men were prosecuted.

Plans are under way to call a mass meeting of all gas workers Sunday in Hyde Park. It is likely, too, that the committee will work to assist the 10 sentenced men, who are free on bail pending an appeal.

U. S. Reduces Investment In Surpluses

By John W. Ball

By The Associated Press

Uncle Sam's investment in price supports for farm products dwindled almost a billion dollars from March to August, the August 31 financial statement of the Commodity Credit Corporation revealed yesterday

The statement also disclosed that CCC has suffered a net loss in the first two months of the new fiscal year of $26,625,398 of which the realized loss from price-support operations amounted to $13,678,289. Other losses were in interest, overhead expenses and adjustments of reserves for estimated losses.

(The net loss for CCC for the year ending June 30 was about 628 million dollars, or an average of 50 million a month, of which about 250 million was realized loss due to price support operations.)

The Government's investment last March in price supports totaled 4227 million dollars. It was so high that Congress authorized an addition of two billion dollars to CCC's capital. At that time CCC had power to borrow 4750 million dollars from the Treasury to carry on its price support operations. Congress raised that to 6750 million.

On August 30, the Government's investment in price supports was down to 3294 million dollars. Accountants predict that the September 30 report may show a further reduction probably bringing the investment down below three billion dollars.

Heavier Losses in Sight

The nature of the holdings now indicate that the next year may show heavier total losses for CCC, in proportion to the price support operations, than last year. This is because Government inventories and loans on the basic, storable crops, are far below last year, while huge increases have been shown in the nonbasic, semiperishable commodities such as butter, dried milk, cheese, etc.

The Government holdings of perishables on August 31 compared with August 31, 1949, were:

	August 1950	August 1949
Butter	$117,238,000	$19,215,000
Cheese	34,653,000	89,000
Dried milk	52,243,000	17,470,000
Dried eggs	115,742,000	90,880,000
Turkeys	1,824,000	....

On the other hand, on August 31 only 114 million dollars had been loaned on 1950 crop wheat, against 337 million a year ago on 1949 wheat. Only 10 million dollars worth of 1950 barley had been placed under price support loans, against 15 million a year ago on 1949 barley.

Some Near Vanishing Point

Holdings of some commodities such as peanuts and wool had dropped almost to the vanishing point.

Others on which comparatively large sums had been invested a year ago and on which virtually nothing has been loaned on this year's crop include dried prunes and raisins, while soybeans, in which Uncle Sam had invested 21 million in August, 1949, had cost the Government only $839,000 so far this year.

Direct Regulation Of Industry Nears

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Off to a slow start, the National Production Authority (NPA) is now moving steadily toward more direct and positive regulation of industry, by rationing scarce industrial materials and limiting the output of nonessential goods.

NPA Director William H. Harrison told a press conference yesterday that in a matter of two to three months, some scarce materials might have to be allocated. That is, the Government would direct how much of each raw material should go to various defense producers and essential industries.

From other sources, it was indicated the NPA also is considering the counterpart step to allocation—limitation orders. These would require certain industries to turn out not more than a certain number, or a certain percent of previous production. The cutback orders would be applied, of course, to those industries producing civilian items that consume large amounts of scarce materials, principly metals.

Thus, the industries affected would be those making autos, refrigerators, television sets, freezers and other heavy household electrical equipment.

The NPA, it was intimated, realizes orders of this sort have to be issued in a binding way by a Government agency; mere voluntary action by the industries concerned is not enough to meet the problem.

So far in its three weeks' life, the NPA has issued only two orders. One generally limited stocks of certain materials which businesses could keep on hand. The other established the device of a simple priority. Military purchasers can give their orders a "DO rating," giving them precedence over other work and permitting their makers to get first call on raw materials and supplies.

This latter order will be taken as a kind of starting point, NPA officials said. Additions to it will be issued to prescribe in much more detail specific acts that must be performed to assure defense production.

At his press conference, Harrison mentioned aluminum and copper as examples of materials where shortages, and therefore rationing, would likely take place. He said he thought the defense program would have little effect on the civilian economy before Christmas. But when that program gets into swing, the civilian economy will feel a "real pinch," he concluded.

NPA is currently seeking to work out arrangements with the steel industry to effect a fair distribution of defense orders among the various companies. The industry fears some companies will be handed a disproportionately large number of "DO" orders, and will thus be at a disadvantage with their competitors in serving their civilian customers.

In the process of making a fair arrangement, Representative Emmanuel Celler (D., N. Y.) urged that small steel companies should be given a voice. Cellar, chairman of a House subcommittee studying monopoly power, made his appeal yesterday in a letter to Commerce Secretary Sawyer. He said he was concerned that small steel makers had no representation on the NPA steel products advisory committee.

5 D.C. Officials Reclassified For Higher Pay

The District Commissioners yesterday reclassified five high city positions with the result that the present jobholders will receive pay raises ranging from $1400 to $2200 a year.

Charles Stofberg, special assistant to Commissioner John Russell Young, said these changes were made:

Position of secretary of the Board of Commissioners was raised from grade GS-13 to GS-15, increasing Secretary Geoffrey M. Thornett's salary from $8600 to $10,000; special assistant to the president of the Board of Commissioners raised from GS-12 to GS-14 (Stofberg, $7200 to $8800); special assistant to the engineer commissioner raised from GS-9 to GS-12 (George A. England, $4850 to $6400); superintendent of licenses raised from GS-12 to GS-14 (C. T. Nottingham, $6600 to $8800); director of weights, measures and markets raised from GS-12 to GS-14 (J. Thomas Kennedy, $7000 to $8800).

Commissioner John Russell Young said the changes were made to bring pay into line with increased responsibilities. Work handled by the License Bureau and the Department of Weights, Measures and Markets has become increasingly important and complex, he said, and the positions held by Thornett and Stofberg have not been reclassified for 10 or 15 years.

Victor A. Howard, secretary of the District Personnel Board, said such up-grading is authorized by the Classification Act of 1949. The action is subject to review by the Civil Service Commission, he said.

Price Figures By Pearson Are Disputed

Figures on the rise of food costs presented by Drew Pearson in his column last Wednesday were branded "inaccurate" and "misleading" yesterday by Rowland Jones, jr., president of the American Retail Federation.

In his column, Pearson accused President Truman of failure to act on inflation and offered food price figures to support his contention. These figures, Jones said, tended to "alarm the American housewife" when "the Nation is just now recovering from a buying spree."

"Such erroneous statements," Jones declared, "are obviously efforts to compel price controls before they are needed. Retailers will cheerfully accept all necessary price and wage controls, when they are conclusively demonstrated to be essential, but they feel strongly that unnecessary and premature controls serve only to destroy the goal for which they were intended."

Jones compared some of Pearson's food price figures with those of the Bureau of Labor Statistics in support of his contention they were "inaccurate". Whereas Pearson said over-all food prices had risen nearly 20 percent since the outbreak of the Korean war, Jones said, BLS figures show they have risen slightly more than 1 percent.

In specific instances, Jones cited these differences.

Pearson alleged creamery butter had increased 16 percent; BLS figures show an increase of 2 percent.

The Pearson article showed an increase of 8 to 10 percent in prices of bakery products; the BLS figure is 5 percent.

Pearson charged increases of 18 percent for milk and 33 percent for round steak. BLS figures show an 8 percent increase for milk while round steak prices have declined "fractionally."

Pearson reported a rise of 10 percent for pork chops and 16 percent for bacon, while the BLS shows pork chops up 6 percent and bacon up 14 percent.

Pearson was "substantially correct" on egg and coffee prices but egg prices "are now on the way down."

"Pearson completely failed to mention," Jones said, "statements by the Department of Agriculture that meat prices have turned the corner and are on the way down. Nor did he mention that wholesale commodity prices are also declining."

Fire Damages Drug Store

An inspector in the District Fire Marshal's office got an early start on checknig a fire in the Whelan Drug Store, 18th st. and Columbia rd. nw. yesterday. He turned in the first of two alarms.

The inspector, Paul J. Lynch, was walking past the store about 10:15 a. m. when he noticed smoke pouring out of the basement vents along the sidewalk.

Damage was confined to the basement.

The June 1949 Policeman of the Month, Traffic Division Pvt. Ledley A. Wallace, suffered skin abrasions in responding to the fire on his motorcycle.

The cycle collided with the side of a truck on Massachusetts ave. between 6th and 7th sts. nw.

Wallace, 36, lives at 606 Chesapeake st. se.

Saturday-School Rumor Political, Dewey Charges

EN ROUTE WITH DEWEY, Oct. 5 (AP).—Governor Dewey accuses the Democrats of spreading rumors that children will have to attend school on Saturdays if he's re-elected.

"When they get that low, they have actually gotten below the level of Tammany sewers," Dewey told an Olean Republican rally last night.

Dewey said a Republican woman worker told him her son had brought the tale home from school.

Casket Sales Tax Plea Lost by Undertakers

For purposes of computing District sales tax payments, "delivery" of a casket is made when it has been selected and the body placed in it—not when it is delivered to the place of burial.

So ruled the District Board of Tax Appeals yesterday in the first case to come before it involving the city's new sales tax. The appeal was made by the W. W. Chambers Co., undertakers, which contended it owed $1423.18 less than the city claimed.

Lawrence Kroenigsberger, sole member of the tax board, said the company had paid no taxes during a three-month period last year on burials held outside the city, on the grounds that goods delivered outside the city were not subject to tax. Kroenigsberger said the company also had paid taxes on only 20 percent of the price of funerals held in the city. He overruled the company in both instances and upheld the extra assessment of $1423.19.

Meanwhile, Allan F. Brooke, District sales tax administrator, announced that sales tax receipts on August sales totaled $1,107.041. This figure compared with about $790,000 collected in August, 1949, the first month the tax was in effect.

Area Teachers Vote For Split in VEA Unit

Creation of a separate Virginia Education Association district for the area encompassing Alexandria, Arlington, Fairfax and Falls Church was approved yesterday by VEA delegates from the nearby Virginia area.

The resolution calls for separation from delegates from six other northern Virginia counties which, together with the four nearby units, now constitute District H of the VEA.

The new unit would take the designation of District H. The other counties would be in a new district, N.

The resolution was adopted during the first section of the annual District H meeting at Fairfax High School.

The teachers from Alexandria, Arlington, Fairfax and Falls Church met yesterday. Delegates from the six other counties will convene today in Culpeper. No auditorium large enough for the whole group was available.

The necessity for two separate meetings was cited by District leaders yesterday as one of the reasons for splitting the district. They said the split already has been indorsed by delegates from other counties in the district. A formal vote of ratification will be taken today, they said.

Yesterday's session was devoted primarily to group discussions centering on the theme of the annual meeting, "Character Development in the Total School Program." The 1200 participating teachers were divided into 16 units for forum talks and an interchange of ideas.

Nine hundred delegates from educational organizations and Government are scheduled to attend the two-day conference at the United States Chamber of Commerce Building, 1615 H st. nw.

The conference was called by the American Council on Education to help schools prepare programs that will meet the military needs of the Nation without undue sacrifice of liberal arts training. The council said the schools need "to plan in terms of the immediate needs of the emergency and potential all-out war."

Speakers at the opening session at 9:30 a. m. today include Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service; Eric A. Walker, executive secretary of the Research and Development Board; Robert L. Clark, director of the Manpower Office of the National Security Resources Board; Earl J. Selection meetings will be held this afternoon at 2 p. m. and Saturday morning. General recommendations will be considered at the Saturday afternoon session at 2 p. m. George F. Zook, president of the American Council on Education, will conclude the program with an address, "The Challenge of the Future to Higher Education."

School Bond Move Delayed In Arlington

Petitions calling for a referendum November 7 on a $7,450,000 bond issue for Arlington school construction may be filed in the county's Circuit Court today.

It had been planned to file the petitions yesterday, but the move was delayed because of the absence from court of Judge Walter T. McCarthy, according to Arlington School Superintendent William Early. However, Early said, school officials can file the request any time up to 20 days before election.

The bond issue is proposed to finance an extensive program of school improvements.

Registration For Vote Set In Virginia

Special opportunities will be offered in nearby Virginia for new voters to register before the Saturday deadline for participation in the November 7 general election.

Election officials in Alexandria, Arlington, Falls Church and Fairfax will hold special registration hours Saturday although all of the offices usually are closed on Saturday.

These Saturday schedules were announced: Alexandria, City Hall, 9 a. m. to 1 p. m.; Arlington, County Courthouse, 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.; Falls Church, City Hall, 8:30 a. m. to 4:30 p. m., and Fairfax, County Courthouse, 9 a. m. to 4:30 p. m.

In both Arlington and Fairfax, voters also may register Saturday only at the homes of individual precinct registrars. In Falls Church and Alexandria, only central registrars are employed.

To be eligible to register, voters must have lived in the State for one year prior to the election date, in the city or county six months and in the precinct in which they wish to vote for 30 days. They also must have paid, on or before last May 6, all assessable poll taxes for a period not to exceed three years.

Persons who will become 21 years of age before the election date can register without payment of poll taxes, provided they have complied with residence requirements.

'Hurrah for Stalin, Wrong Number'—Click

A broadcaster commented in a program aimed at Hungary:

M'Keldin Hits Freight Rate For Coal

CUMBERLAND, Md., Oct. 5 (AP)—Theodore R. McKeldin, Republican candidate for governor, said tonight that "discriminatory freight rates" are to blame for the "distress among miners of the western Maryland coal fields."

In a speech prepared for broadcast here, McKeldin contended the present Democratic State administration has shown indifference to the situation, and promised:

"When I am elected governor I will use our State law department and every bit of prestige and influence that the State of Maryland can exert to present before the Interstate Commerce Commission the reasons why these unfavorable and discriminatory rates should be eliminated."

He added that "I further pledge the people of Garrett and Allegany Counties that the State institutions and departments of Maryland will use Maryland-mined coal whenever bituminous coal is used, or can be used, in those institutions."

McKeldin said it is useless to look for new industries when we do not do our utmost to protect the natural industries that are with us today.

French Army Perfects Tank-Killer at $14

PARIS, Oct. 5 (U.P.)—High-ranking Atlantic Pact staff officers today confirmed the French army has perfected an armor-piercing rifle grenade that could theoretically make every infantryman a tank-killer for 14 dollars.

During recent tests, the grenade pierced seven inches of armor plating at 125 yards. A second charge, which is fired on impact, bores a small hole through armor plating, and a shaped charge scatters shrapnel through the interior of a tank.

Ex-Candidate Becomes Ex-Democrat in County

A former candidate for Democratic nomination to the Montgomery County Council yesterday announced he has become a Republican.

Gerald D. Morgan, a Washington attorney who lives at 5509 Edgemoor 1a., Bethesda, disclosed the change in a statement in which he described the county's Democratic Party as a "boss-ridden steamroller." He referred, he said, to E. Brooke Lee, county Democratic leader.

Morgan charged that local Democratic candidates in the party primary September 18 "were not chosen with a view either to their desire or their ability to serve the public interest." On the other hand, he contended, the Republican Party demonstrated a real sense of public responsibility in the type of candidates it nominated."

His charges were labeled by Warren Browning, chairman of the county's Democratic Committee as "absolutely ridiculous." He denied the party is controlled by any individual, adding "and Morgan knows this."

"As for changing his party affiliations," Browning said, "it was the honest thing for him to do since he had worked for the Republican National Committee in helping draft the Taft-Hartley Act."

Morgan filed as a Democrat for election to the Montgomery Council last February, but withdrew from the race August 4. His action in filling as a party candidate led to a Maryland Court of Appeals decision invalidating Montgomery's nonpartisan election laws.

One Man Dead in Fire At Great Lakes Station

GREAT LAKES, Ill., Oct. 5 (AP) Fire swept through a two-story frame building at Great Lakes Naval Training Station early today, killing one man and causing damage estimated by officers at $300,000.

Lutherans to Join New Church Council

DES MOINES, Oct. 5 (AP).—In a move which marked a historic departure for America's largest body of Lutherans, the United Lutheran Church in America (ULCA) voted overwhelmingly at its convention today to become a member of the new National Council of Churches of Christ in America.

The decision to become a voting member of NCCCUSA, taken after ULCA leaders had recommended the step, marks the 2 million member church's first venture into full membership in such a cooperative American Protestant agency.

Approval was by standing vote of the delegates after floor debate on the proposal. Because of the overwhelming size of the approval votes a count was not taken.

The NCCCUSA is to be organized formally at a meeting which opens in Cleveland late next month. NCCCUSA will absorb the Federal Council of Churches and seven other inter-denominational agencies.

The Augustana Lutheran Church and the Danish Lutheran Church, along with 19 other Protestant faiths and four eastern orthodox churches, previously had voted to join NCCCUSA.

Dr. Franklin Clark Fry, ULCA prsident who urged affiliation with NCCCUSA, stressed that the move would not reverse or broaden ULCA policies and does not repeal Lutheran opposition to common worship with other Christians.

Dr. F. Eppling Reinartz, ULCA secretary who has been a nonvoting commissioner to the Federal Council of Churches, said the new NCCCUSA probably would draw fire from controversialists. He said friends of the new agency "will stoutly resist all uninformed, unfair and malicious attacks upon it."

The Rev. Dr. Henry H. Bagger, Lancaster, Pa., former president of the Pittsburgh synod, during debate on the proposed move, said that there is "no better time than today to take this step. This is the time when Christian churches need to present a common front."

Appeal Rejected

Melish Loses Long Battle For Pulpit

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 15 (U.P.).—Dr. John H. Melish, Brooklyn clergyman ousted from the pulpit because he supported his son's ties with an alleged subversive organization, lost his long fight for reinstatement today.

The Court of Appeals refused to hear the 76-year-old clergyman's appeal from lower-court decisions affirming his ouster as rector of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity, Brooklyn.

The State's highest tribunal ruled unanimously that no constitutional question was raised.

Dr. Melish was ousted under canonical law April 4, 1949, after he supported his son and Assistant Rector, the Rev. William Howard Mellish. The younger Melish was former chairman of the National Council of Soviet-American Friendship, an organization branded as subversive by former United States Attorney Genearl Tom Clark.

The younger Melish testified in the lower court he never was a Communist and did not sympathize with Communists.

Melish's lawyer sought to appeal on the ground that the lower court decision upholding the ouster was "an unwarranted intrusion in a religious controversy in violation of the constitutional separation of church and state."

The decision confirmed in effect the ouster of Melish's son, who automatically relinquished his job when his father was ousted.

Ex-Wife Of Beloff Sues For Daughter

Mrs. May Beloff Spivak yesterday filed a habeas corpus petition to get custody of her seven-year-old daughter, Sylvia Beloff.

Judge Alexander Holtzoff, after hearing preliminaries, ordered the child produced in District Court at 10 a.m. today for the trial.

The jurist said it would have been "almost indecent" to hold the trial yesterday, just a few hours after the father, Simon Beloff, wealthy real estate man, was buried. Beloff in 1948 divorced his wife on charges of adultery and was awarded custody of the child.

In his will, Sylvia gets $25 a week until she is 18, $10 a week more if she goes to business school, and $1000 a year thereafter. Her children get the bulk of his estate, estimated at $250,000.

The habeas corpus petition filed by Mrs. Spivak, who after the divorce married the co-respondent, Leon Spivak, charges that with Beloff's death she is entitled to custody of their only child.

Beloff, 68, cut off without a cent his divorced wife, who is 31.

Mrs. Spivak said that the child is being held by a paternal uncle, Sam Beloff of 2118 3d st. ne.

Attorney Allen Kamerow, who represents the Beloff estate, told the court that Sam Beloff was served with the subpena in the habeas corpus case during the burial of Simon Beloff. Kamerow asked for a reasonable continuance.

Kamerow then said that by the divorce decree it was indicated that Mrs. Spivak was not a fit mother.

"A woman can sometimes be a bad wife but a good mother," the judge replied. "The father having died, it may be a matter of right that custody be turned over to the mother forthwith."

Pan-American Sanitary Unit Reelects Soper

Dr. Fred L. Soper, of Chevy Chase, Md., has been reelected director of the Pan-American Sanitary Bureau for a second four-year term, it was announced yesterday.

He has served as the bureau's head since 1947. In May, 1949, the bureau began to act as the regional office for the Americas of the World Health Organization.

Sect Opposes Beer for the Fighting GIs

FREDERICK, Md., Oct. 5 (AP).—The 162d annual Pennsylvania Conference of the Evangelical United Brethren Church criticized today the free distribution of beer to American fighting troops in Korea.

A report protesting beer distribution to troops was drawn up by the conference Christian Social Action Committee and was adopted by the conference today.

The report also opposed the sale of intoxicating beverages to servicemen anywhere and protested the staging of sports, movies and other entertainment on Sundays.

Another report expressed opposition to "the appointment of a personal or ambassadorial representative from this country to the Vatican."

40 Hurt in Erie, Pa., Train Wreck

ERIE, Pa., Oct. 5 (AP).—A speeding New York Central streamliner was wrecked in a terrific explosion and fire early today but its 153 dozing passengers miraculously escaped death.

More than 40 persons were injured, none seriously.

The New England States Express, cruising through this lake city at more than a mile a minute, sliced into an oil tank car that popped out of a passing freight train. The tanker erupted in a blast that shook downtown Erie.

Huge flames licked around the express' stainless steel coaches as 11 of them zig-zagged to a grinding halt crosswise on the tracks. Only one car—a dormitory for dining car employes—caught fire.

One coach carrying 50 passengers turned over on its side. The 75-car freight piled up on a parallel track. A disaster call went out Within minutes some 20 doctors, 50 firemen and a like number of policemen were at the scene

Together with hundreds of passersby and railroad employes the rescue crews worked feverishly to free passengers from flame-seared cars under the ominous threat of spreading fire or new explosions.

The fast-working rescuers slithered in pools of thick oil from the smashed tanker and the battered diesel of the passenger train. Another tank car wrecked in the freight was loaded with powdered chemical which Fire Chief Lawrence Scully was unable to identify.

Scully's men battled the scattered blazes and prowled in the wreckage to prevent spread of the fires. Said the fire chief:

"It was one of the most unusual fires in my experience. And it was a God's blessing that those people escaped. Our first thought was to get those people out of that overturned car.

"The fact that many persons weren't killed is certainly a tribute to the all-steel passenger cars." cars."

Crewmen of the two trains said they were unable to prevent the crash. Ray Bloom, fireman on the express, said his train was doing 70 miles an hour shortly before the collision. He and Engineer Charles Samuels of Buffalo, N. Y., were uninjured

Army, Union Sweating Out Ft. Belvoir Strike

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

They're just sweating out the Fort Belvoir carpenters' strike.

This appeared to be the consensus yesterday of Army and building trades officials.

You can count the GIs in, too. Among the projects that are being delayed, according to Fort Belvoir officials, are in infiltration course—where soldiers crawl under live ammunition—a mock village, and an obstacle course.

Union carpenters of three construction firms are striking, a union spokesman explained, in protest against the granting of a Fort Belvoir repair job to a fourth contractor who uses non-union help.

Parleys, But No Progress

A Defense Department spokesman said there had been no progress toward a settlement, despite some conferences.

Some officials indicated belief the strike might run on until after the nonunion contractor has finished his project, a $100,000 job scheduled for completion around October 15 or 18.

B. B. Blackburn, spokesman for the Carpenters' District Council, AFL, said there was no settlement in sight. He stated there was nothing else to call the carpenters' action but a strike, although they had no protest against their employers—only against the Fort Belvoir policy of permitting nonunion men to work there.

Blackburn said the Belvoir situation did not conflict with the declaration of policy adopted this week at Houston, Texas, by the Building Trades Department of the AFL.

Houston Declaration

The Houston declaration said, "We are prepared to assume our full responsibility in the crisis now facing our country, to provide an adequate number of building trades employes for any work directly or indirectly connected with the war program—whether in this country or any other country."

Blackburn said the policy was correct, and the local building trades would support it in full as long as they did not run up against efforts to mix non-union people into projects on which union men were employed.

Fort Belvoir officers said about 10 percent of the more than $300,000 in contracts was for construction of training courses, and the rest for rehabilitating barracks to house incoming troops.

With the 150 carpenters out, Maj. Gen. Douglas L. Weart, commander of Fort Belvoir, ordered troop unit commanders to use GI mechanics to make minor repairs needed for safety and health.

The three union contractors are Victor Beauchamp, Inc.; Shriber Contracting Co., and Pruitt Construction Co. The strike is aimed at Pomponio and Sons.

7 Convicted Of Rape Lose Plea for Writ

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 5 (AP).—Writs of habeas corpus were denied today by Judge M. Ray Doubles to seven Martinsville Negroes sentenced to death for raping a white woman.

In an eight-page opinion, the Hustings Court Part II judge ordered vacated stays of execution for the men. He also stipulated that "new dates for execution of the sentences imposed upon the petitioners should be set in the manner provided by law."

Martin A. Martin, counsel for the men, said his future plans are indefinite.

"We can't tell yet what we will do until after we see the opinion," he stated. Judge Doubles heard arguments on the petitions last Saturday.

Martin, however, has two more legal avenues he can explore. He can give new life to the case by appealing Judge Doubles' decision to the Virginia Supreme Court. If this fails, he then can go to the United States Supreme Court.

The cases already have been reviewed by the State Supreme Court and the trial court convictions affirmed. Efforts by Martin to have the United States Supreme Court hear the cases were unsuccessful.

Counsel for the seven based their petitions for writs of habeas corpus on the contention that the death sentence for rape in Virginia is reserved exclusively for Negroes.

Georgetown U. Opens Year With High Mass

The ceremony of the Solemn High Mass of the Holy Ghost, a Georgetown University tradition for nearly a century, was celebrated yesterday on the esplanade of the White Gravenor building on the university campus.

Celebrant was the Very Rev. Hunter Guthrie, university president, assisted by the Rev. Gerard F. Yates, dean of the graduate school, as deacon, and the Rev. Brian A. McGrath, dean of the college of arts and sciences, as subdeacon.

The annual outdoor ceremony, which consecrates the opening of each new academic year, includes an academic procession led by a cross-bearer and acolytes. The mass was sung by the 40-voice Woodstock College Choir.

The Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, regent of the School of Foreign Service and vice president of the university, delivered the sermon.

Probe Into Murder Of Md. Girl Reopened

Maryland State police have reopened investigation of the 1946 murder of Betty Jane Kennedy, 19-year-old Hagerstown, Md., girl, on the basis of a dying convict's boast to fellow prisoners.

The high school girl's nude body was found four years ago on a lonely mountain road near Waynesboro, Pa., close to the Maryland-Pennsylvania State line. She had been strangled with a rope Detective Sergt. John Cassidy yesterday revisited the spot where she had been found dead and talked to officials in Harrisburg, police said.

According to police, the convict died in the Maryland State Penitentiary about a year ago. Word leaked out later, however, that he had bragged to fellow convicts about the murder.

The prisoner's story, police said, was that the Kennedy girl knew too much about a safecracking gang, of which he was a member, and that the gang waylaid and killed her. Then, the story was they secreted her body in a car and took it to the lonely road.

State police picked up four men for questioning Tuesday but released them after 24 hours. Police said all four were in the clear.

They would not comment further except to say that "the case is still very much alive."

Under Same Roof

Couple Given Divorce After 15-Year Rift

A 53-year-old salesman who claims he lived under the same roof with his wife for 15 years, but neither ate nor slept with her, was granted a divorce yesterday.

He is Albert J. Maier, who resided with his wife at 716 Allison st. nw., until May, shortly before he filed suit. The decree was granted by Judge Jennings Bailey of District Court on grounds of voluntary separation for more than five years.

Under local law, a couple can claim voluntary separation when they live under the same roof but not as man and wife.

According to Maier, who was represented by Attorney Dorsey K. Offutt, after an argument in 1935, the couple moved to separate parts of the house and shared neither bed nor board.

Mrs. Maier testified that she prepared meals for her husband but that he refused to eat them.

The Maiers had been married for 35 years and have two adult children.

Judge Bailey set October 16 for a hearing on alimony and maintenance for Mrs. Maier.

London Rajah Proves To Be No Gentleman

LONDON, Oct. 5 (AP).—Rajah, an Indian elephant at the London Zoo, was put in chains today for conduct unbecoming a gentleman.

Rajah pushed a hole in a wall at one end of his cage with his head. He was greeted by screams. On the other side of the wall is the ladies' powder room.

Explosion Kills 32 In Undersea Mine

LOTA, Chile, Oct. 5 (U.P.). Thirty-two miners were known dead and five were injured in a fire-damp explosion early today inside one of the deep undersea pits of the Lota collieries. Three of the injured were in a critical condition.

Some 70 miners were working in the Carlos Cousino gallery, under Lota Bay, when the explosion occurred. It was feared that more of the trapped miners will be found dead by rescue parties now removing the debris to reach them.

Juicy Fruit Gum by Any Other Name Doesn't Smell So Sweetly

It was Juicy Fruit chewing gum, rather than whisky, that police smelled on his breath, David Douglas Davenport, 34, claimed yesterday in Municipal Court.

But all that this got Davenport, erstwhile Union Station bootlegger, was a $15 fine.

Davenport was arrested September 19 and charged with being drunk on 8th st. between L and M sts. nw. He took the witness stand in his own behalf before Judge Nadine L. Gallagher.

"I was chewing Juicy Fruit gum," testified Davenport. "You know, judge, that's awfully strong chewing gum."

"I know," replied Judge Gallagher with a laugh.

"I have been in court 131 times previously and have never been caught in a lie," added Davenport.

But the judge convicted Davenport.

Davenport has kept a running account of his appearances before the court in the past few years. Although he has won a number of his cases, he has spent more than a year in jail and paid hundreds of dollars in fines. He was released from jail several weeks ago.

Charges against him have ranged from illegal sales of whisky, disorderly conduct to assault, vagrancy, indecent exposure. He has denied all charges except bootlegging.

Zone Appeal Board Studies Camp Case

Question of whether the Blandy Tourist Camp at 1218 Rockville pike, near Rockville, Md., is in legal nonconforming use was handed to the Montgomery County Board of Zoning Appeals last night at a public hearing held in Bethesda County Building.

Trial Magistrate James R. Miller, of the Rockville law firm of Miller & Miller, contended that the camp was in operation before any mention of the zoning ordinance for the county was spread upon the minutes of the County Commissioners.

Approximately 32 persons appeared in favor of the continuance of the camp, of whom 27 were residents of the camp.

Miller pointed out the ordinance adopted in 1936 granted a permit to the camp as a noncomforting use and declared that his clients stand ready to comply with any regulation.

The trailer camp is operated by Rockward Blandy and Mrs. Susannah B. Blandy.

The opposition was led by Warren D. Browning, attorney for Felix Montuori, owner of a tract next to the Blandy camp.

Montuori said the camp was a "worse blight on Montgomery County than Jimmy Fontaine's was on Prince Georges" but pressed by the defense said he was not charging that any gambling was carried on there.

Browning contended that the effective date of the county zoning ordinance was March 6, 1928, while Miller contended it was 1932. The camp was established in 1931.

The zoning law provides that any enterprise in nonconforming use at the time the zoning ordinance became effective is continued as a "legal nonconforming use" unless there is some major change in the business.

Decision was deferred until a later date to permit study of the evidence and the law by the board.

Rent Increases Recommended on 186 Apartments

District Rent Control Examiner William F. Mansfield yesterday recommended rent increases on 186 apartment units at 1641 Columbia rd. nw. and at 654 Girard st. nw. His action becomes final October 14 unless protest is made to the District Rent Control Administrator.

He recommended a 7.9 percent increase for 113 units on Columbia rd. and an 11.48 percent increase for 73 units on Girard st. Owners had asked 12.1 and 12.82 percent respectively.

The increases would advance monthly rents on the Columbia rd. apartments from the present range of $35 to $90 to a range of $37.75 to $97.25. The Girard st. rents now run from $32.50 to $57.50. They would be boosted to range from $36.25 to $64.

Judge Upholds Rule Restricting Hotel Licenses

Judge Richmond B. Keech yesterday upheld a District regulation that restricts hotel license to structures containing at least 30 rooms.

The District Court jurist made the ruling in dismissing a suit brought by Louis Courembis, owner of 212 1st st. se., where he sought a hotel license. The building has 18 rooms.

Courembis claims he was granted a permit to remodel the structure in August, 1948, a month before the new regulation was passed. But when he completed the alteration a hotel license was denied him, he said.

1000 Enlist To Pray for World Peace

The Nocturnal Adoration Society of the Archdiocese of Washington, committed to special prayers for world peace, was organized formally last night in services at the Shrine of the Sacred Heart, 16th st. and Park rd. nw.

More than a thousand Catholic men present were received into the society and commended by Archbishop Patrick A. O'Boyle, who presided at the services.

The world-wide society pledges Catholic men to spend at least one hour in prayer before the Blessed Sacrament on the eve of each first Friday. The men will offer prayers of reparation and prayers for world peace.

In other days, said the Rt. Rev. Monsignor Fulton J. Sheen, national director of the Society for the Propagation of the Faith, and preacher at last night's service, prayers of petition and prayers of intercession were more usual.

"But in this dark night, when the red cobras of atheistic communism would poison with their fangs every soul who believes in God, it becomes necessary to make reparation for the sins and outrages of men," he declared.

"And since most sins are committed at night," he said, "the Archbishop summons us to break our sleep and to pour out our hearts to the Divine Lord in love and adoration."

The Rev. Jerome E. Winter, pastor of the Shrine of The Sacred Heart who is now in Rome on a Holy Year pilgrimage, was named spiritual director of the society.

An early morning fire yesterday made seven persons homeless and caused damage estimated at $25,000 to the home of Mrs. George Pearson, 60, about 3 miles from Waldorf, Md.

According to Fire Chief Charles M. Levering of the LaPlata Volunteer Fire Department, the fire was caused by neglect of a chimney fire earlier in the evening. The 10 room two-story frame house burned to the ground despite efforts of the La Plata and Waldorf fire departments.

Others in the house were a niece, Mrs. George Hood, her husband and three children, Dolores, 16; Donald Lee, 5, and James, 9, and Mrs. Pearson's son, Charles Robert Pearson, 22, who discovered the fire and awakened the family. The fire was the maiden run for the Waldorf department which was organized a week ago. The family was cared for by a relative in Waldorf, firemen said.

Housework Easy Without Nagging Backache

As we get older, stress and strain, overexertion, excessive smoking or exposure to cold sometimes slows down kidney function. This may lead many folks to complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Exceptional Cast In Charming Story

By Richard L. Coe

AN UNUSUALLY HONEST and charming little picture has arrived at the Columbia, "Stars in My Crown."

The very quietness and restraint of this simple film make it one everyone will enjoy. Joel McCrea plays a two-fisted preacher in the post-Civil War South and the story is little more than a gently strung-together series of incidents.

But the very lack of pretentiousness is its endearing quality and a cast of exceptional sincerity makes you believe and rejoice in the scenes you are watching.

McCrea starts his ministerial career with his old cavalry pistols, but as time goes on quiet force turns fear of him into respect.

His problems include a dour young doctor whose aging father longs to pass his practice on to him, though the young fellow doesn't see much future in gaining only the love and affection of a small town. Then there's an old Negro whose lawful property is coveted by a villainous thug. The preacher's stanch defence of the old fellow provides honest excitement, but avoids the heavy hand of happenstance. Then there's a typhoid fever epidemic which takes the lives of many youngsters but also serves to give the young doctor his chance to realize the joys of selfless service.

The story is told through the voice of a man looking back in his maturity on the career of the preacher. In the film you see him as the sturdy Dean Stockwell; the older voice on the soundtrack is that of Marshall Thompson.

McCrea's role of the preacher is finely handled; the part fits this quiet, able personality like a glove. Ellen Drew is fine as his understanding helpmate and there's an able performance by James Mitchell, alternately subdued and flashing as the young doctor. There's depth in this performance beyond what you usually get, and one wonders just why the movie career of this expert dancer ("Brigadoon") has come to a halt.

Sure hands take care of the character roles: Lewis Stone, Alan Hale, Juano Hernandez, Charles Kemper, Ed Begley, Connie Gilchrist and Arthur Hunnicutt.

Despite the lack of confidence its makers seem to have in it (it's been a long while getting to the Columbia), "Stars in My Crown" is a picture worth seeing and you'll find yourself cheerfully humming its hymn-tune theme long after you say goodby to McCrea and his fellows.

LOOKS AS THOUGH the Theater Guild subscribers will come close to 12,000, which is socko going considering that lapse of two years . . . While this list will take much of the Gayety, there will nonetheless be seats for nonsubscribers for both "The Curious Savage," which opens its two weeks Monday night, and "The Relapse or Virtue in Danger," which had its American premiere last night in Wilmington and will be unloading its "split my windpipes" and such at the Gayety starting the 23d.

TONIGHT begins the third season of film showings at the Institute of Contemporary Arts . . . As in the past, members of the outfit at 1322 New York ave. get first dig on the seats, but the public is admitted at a buck a throw . . . Performances in this series of 20 revivals will be Friday and Saturday nights at 8:40 . . . "Grand Illusion" and a short on Painter Vincent Van Gogh form the first program.

THE UNITARIAN PLAYERS open their fall season tonight with three one-act plays at Pierce Hall, 15th and Harvard sts. . . . John Wentworth has directed: "Aria da Capo," "World Without Men" and "To the Lovely Margaret."

"STARS IN MY CROWN." A Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture produced by William H. Wright and directed by Jacques Tourneur. Screen play by Margaret Fitts, based on the novel and adaptation by Joe David Brown, and narrated by Marshall Thompson. At the Columbia.

In Good Shape

Lana Returns In a Realistic Gotham Story

THERE ARE some realistic bright touches in the Capitol's "A Life of Her Own," wherein Lana Turner returns to the screen after two years of marriage and globe-trotting.

Lana's in great shape, her admirers will be pleased to know, and while her role has that soap opera twist, there are enough moments of honesty to make her adventures reasonably absorbing, especially to the ladies.

The beginning is especially good, with Lana playing a small-town girl arrived in New York to become a model. The agency into which she slips is a sharp spoof on that weird world, with Tom Ewell as the operator. The models are neatly etched, and whoever pulled off the model agency scenes sure 'nuff knew that area of life.

Lana gets linked up with a male from the West, Ray Milland, who has an invalid wife, well acted by Margaret Phillips. There's a scene between the two in the finest tradition and Lana remembers the first model she met after coming to New York, fading, distraught Ann Dvorak, who's got a series of scenes at the start which are mighty impressive.

Lana's admirers will also be pleased to note that though she's playing a model, she's not the angular sort you suspect could also be used as a paper cutter.

The Capitol's stage bill has those Three Arnauts, whose bird-calls can be so blithely amusing. Singer Sonny Howard, big gun of the record folk, headlines; Patrice Helene and Jan Howard give you their lively dances, and De Lage and Shirle yopen the bill with youthful tricks.

Garfield, Neal and Thaxter Put 'Breaking Point' Over

By Orval Hopkins
Post Reporter

"THE BREAKING POINT," at the Warner, is another remake of Ernest Hemingway's graceless novel, "To Have and Have Not." I seem to have read the book years ago and to recall it as one of the worst not only Hemingway but a lot of other people as well ever wrote.

The film bears no resemblance to it, although it has been a long time now. The film is good. It is tightly written by Ranald MacDougall and thoughtfully directed by Michael Curtiz. A man named Norman Stuart is listed here as dialogue director. I have no idea what the dialogue director does, but the dialogue in "The Breaking Point" is excellently handled, and I'm entirely willing to give good old Stuart the credit for it.

John Garfield, Patricia Neal, Phyllis Thaxter, Juano Hernandez and Wallace Ford are principally responsible for getting the picture to move. They all give good performances.

The story relates how Julie (us hep parties in the trade call Garfield "Julie"), a fishing boat operator, gets in a jam in Mexico when a client ditches him. He undertakes to smuggle some Chinese into the States to get himself off the hook. The undertaking fizzles, Garfield kills a Chinese and is in deeper than ever. The crooked lawyer, Ford, who got him in the soup in the first place, fixes him up another tight squeeze, and on this one the story hinges.

Garfield is the type to get out of hand if you don't watch him. He is entirely restrained here. Miss Neal plays a sinful lady forever trying to lead Garfield into the depths. She never makes it, but she comes pleasingly close and is, of course, most attractive as a wicked woman. Phyllis Thaxter does very well indeed with the most difficult role in the show, that of Garfield's wife. Ford, the shyster, got so scared he scared me.

The film has a number of fine little touches—the things that make a good movie, in my not altogether humble opinion. Garfield starts to bite his wife's ear and she cautions him that the children will be back any minute. "Aw, it's educational," he says. The picture ends with a small colored boy waiting silent on the dock for his father, who lies dead on Garfield's boat.

Is good. No credit to Hemingway.

October Magic

October is traditionally a tonic for the soul, and this year it is no exception. Indian Summer does not come, theoretically, until after the first frost, but what Washington is being treated to nowadays has much of the sparkle and languor of that wondrous interval. October is a time of richness, and through its mysterious alchemy the corn is turning from green to the gold of fulfillment. Every day the trees take on new color, with the scarlet sumac, the brilliant orange of the maples and the bronzing oaks furnishing a harmonious contrast to the never-changing backdrop of pines.

It is an out-of-doors month for that reason. A magic carpet is out for the hiker, and for the driver there is a new loveliness in the ruggedness of Harpers Ferry or on top of the Blue Ridge. We commend especially the George Washington National Forest west of Luray, Va., which contains some magnificent and unspoiled drives. Wherever you go, to the mountains, to the shore, or through the rolling hills which rim Washington, the bounty of the land and the delicacy of nature's artistry are blended in a pastoral symphony of incredible goodness and refreshment.

Air Raid Warnings

Agreement of 26 Eastern States and the District of Columbia on uniform air raid warning signals, while important, is hardly anything to crow about. It is a measure of the tardiness of civil defense preparations that only now is this elementary stage in planning being reached, despite the elaborate system worked out in World War II. It is also noteworthy that the determination of what warning devices to use is up to the individual localities—which means that most States don't yet have air raid sirens. In Washington, thanks to the false economy of Congress, it probably would be necessary to rely on fire sirens and church bells if attack should come now.

Another significant fact is that the Air Force has found it necessary to eliminate its "blue" preliminary public warning. In other words, the only warning the public can count upon is the "red," which means that attack is imminent within several minutes. One reason for this change is the fact that jet bombers fly at great speeds, and to give a preliminary warning might require alerting a large area of the Nation. But the basic factor is the present inadequacy of the radar screen, which is operating with old equipment on a makeshift basis to guard selected industrial centers. Air Force Undersecretary McCone has stated that 24 of the most critical new radar installations will be ready by January 1—but the completion of the screen in Alaska will come later, again thanks to congressional delay.

Not much more can be done to speed up the radar screen, but its intimate relation to civil defense shows why it must continue to receive top priority in this country and in Canada. Warning, of course, would be no protection in itself against bombing, but with adequate shelters and proper discipline on the part of the public it should help greatly to minimize loss of life.

Minus Two

Perhaps you remember the limerick about the ungracious young lady, who, for reasons somewhat obscure, went about asking people, "Is it you?" and

When they said, "Yes it is,"
She replied only "Whizz!"

For a good many innings that was about how it was with young Mr. Robin Roberts and the Philadelphia Whiz Kids yesterday. Mr. Roberts, after a rather faltering start, was giving the impression that the bigger the names the less they meant to him. But in the tenth inning he made the mistake of saying "Whiz" once too often to the venerable Mr. Joe Di Maggio, who replied "Whiz yourself," or words to that effect, and knocked the ball into the stands for the home run that sufficed to give the Yankees the second game of the 1950 World Series.

Still, it took 10 innings for Mr. Di Maggio to get around to it. And though it is becoming clearer every day that the Whiz Kids are not children of destiny after all, nobody can deny that they have been putting on a pretty respectable performance; proving that, even if they haven't quite got what it takes to beat the Yankees, they have enough to make the Yankees work hard for what they get.

From a technical point of view the second game was perhaps not as remarkable as the affair of Wednesday afternoon, but it was the occasion of more cold sweats and cardiac palpitations, and thus more rewarding to those who paid for the tickets. Neither Mr. Roberts nor Mr. Reynolds exhibited as much virtuosity as Mr. Raschi and Mr. Konstanty, but they were both strong when they needed to be. And that, as it turned out, was in almost every inning.

From now on the 1950 series is likely to be something of an anti-climax; with a consequent sagging of interest even in Philadelphia. It is not impossible, of course, that the Phillies may retrieve the ground they have lost; but we suspect that at this stage even Lloyds of London would be reluctant to insure the Phillies against a failure to win the world's championship.

Korean Elections

It is impossible to find in the resolution on Korea passed by the Political Committee of the United Nations Assembly any specific procedure for the holding of new elections when Korea is unified. The problem, of course, is whether to hold elections for all of Korea, or merely for the 100 seats reserved for North Korea in the present National Assembly at Seoul. In a sense the lack of decision of the Political Committee leaves the new seven-nation U. N. Korean Commission free to appraise the situation on the spot and recommend a solution. But it also passes the buck on what, without firm and immediate leadership, may become an explosive political question.

On the one hand there is the claim of the Rhee government in South Korea. This was legally elected in United Nations-sponsored elections in 1948 after the U. N. had fruitlessly tried to arrange elections for the entire country. Another election was held in the spring of this year, also under U. N. auspices. Whatever may be said of the police excesses of the Rhee regime, its difficulties with fiscal affairs and its inadequacy on land reform, it has been a force for stability in a land of violent political discord. The very fact that the 1950 election went against Mr. Rhee, despite some intimidation, is an argument against the charge of "police state." Moreover, the conduct of the South Korean army has been both responsible and impressive. And the attitude expressed by President Rhee himself on the liberation of Seoul—that the North Korean leaders would be punished but not the misled North Korean people—is statesmanlike.

On the other hand there is the desirability of a clean slate to start out the newly unified country. British Foreign Minister Bevin has observed that merely to give the North Koreans 100 seats in the existing Assembly would be, not unification, but annexation. The legal way for all-Korean elections is clear in the fact that the present government has been recognized by the U. N. as the authority only in "that part of Korea where the Temporary Commission was able to observe and consult." Furthermore, there is, undeniably, considerable animus against President Rhee and his cabinet. (In Korea the President is elected by the Assembly, and the ministers serve at his pleasure.) The best way to quiet unrest under this head might be to start afresh with a national election; if President Rhee has a genuine popular following he would not have to fear such a procedure.

However, the difficulties in holding a fair election in a land ravaged by war cannot be underestimated. The question of how to handle the land reforms initiated by the Communists, for example, is likely to result in indescribable turmoil. Consequently there may be merit in the informal suggestion broached by the United States that the first election be for the 100 seats reserved for North Korea, and that at the expiration of President Rhee's term in 1952 a genuinely national election be held. In any event, the close supervision and help of the U. N. commission will be essential. The responsibility for working out an acceptable election compromise is particularly a job for Asian leadership. India is especially well suited for this role, but if she declines to accept the commission seat reserved for her, Pakistan might logically fill the breach.

McCarran Revision

Nine Democratic Senators who supported the President's veto of the McCarran Act have joined in a statement calling for the repeal or drastic modification of the law when Congress reconvenes at the end of November. It may be taken more or less for granted, judging from the size of the votes by which the President's veto was overridden in the Senate and the House, that outright repeal is out of the question for the present. Modification may reasonably be hoped for, however, in the light of the law's extravagances. Already these extravagances are creating extremely awkward problems which were certainly not foreseen by many of the act's sponsors. The immigration provisions in particular will have to be revised if embarrassing diplomatic difficulties are to be avoided.

It is possible that Congress will be able to take a sober second look at this legislation when it reconvenes. For one thing, the election will be out of the way by then. For another, the excitement stirred up by the Korean war will have somewhat abated. Perhaps Congress will be able two months hence to examine the measure dispassionately; to hold hearings on some of its drastic features, drafted and passed with scarcely a semblance of inquiry into their consequences; and to vote on amendments with at least diminished partisanship. It is shocking to reflect that the unprecedented detention provisions and the fanatical immigration restrictions of the act were adopted without any testimony whatever as to their constitutionality and probable effects.

The chief problem in getting some rational revision of the McCarran Act is to provide a rational climate for discussion of it. It must have been concern over this problem that prompted the nine Democratic supporters of the President to warn advocates of repeal against any association with Communist-sponsored attacks on the measure. We have no doubt that Communist-sponsored attacks contributed greatly to enactment of the law; we have little doubt, either, that this was their intended result. For the law undermines American institutions more damagingly than anything the Communists themselves could accomplish. "We are not interested in protecting Communists," the proponents of repeal declared. "We are interested in protecting both the security and the freedom of America."

Mediterranean

The Greco-Turkish move toward a Mediterranean mutual assistance pact coincides with the announcement that Turkey (followed, since then by Greece) has been associated in the North Atlantic Alliance. It might have been better, perhaps, to wait till a Mediterranean pact had been signed, sealed, and delivered, and then to have established a working arrangement between the two instrumentalities. Clearly the eastern end of the Mediterranean is of signal importance in the strategy of the Western world, and unity would be added insurance to the Western allies as well as to the constituent nations.

It speaks well for Premier Venizelos that he has taken up the idea of a mutual assistance pact which began to be bruited after the March 2 election, though former Premier Tsaldaris had such a project in mind. Greece cannot live alone in a dangerous world. Nor can it safely nurse the chauvinism and irredentism which ignite the average Greek when he is in high spirits. Her security is dependent upon the building of close and neighborly relations with the nonsatellite countries in the Near East. This was the policy of General Plastiras, and it was made evident to Belgrade, where Tito began to show interest in an understanding with Athens, though not, of course, in an alliance. Of even more importance to the Western world would be the fruition of conversations with Ankara.

No country has used American aid to better purpose than has Turkey. Turkey is experienced in the ways of the neighboring Cossack, and an alertness is always present in her bones. She had been weathering the war of nerves which Moscow declared upon her in 1945 when the Greco-Turkish aid was voted in 1947. The help did not so much strengthen her nerve, which was iron enough, as put extra power behind her sinews. Turkey's will to resist is an example to other countries in the Old World, her absence of fear an example to us all. This latter was demonstrated by the proffer of 4000 troops for the Korean campaign, also by additions to the liberties of the subject at a time when in other countries there is a tendency, excused by the tensions of the times, to subtract from them.

Turkey's interest in a pact with Greece is testimony to the military health and sturdy independence which have now returned to Greece. Her army has again become a factor in Balkan politics. A Mediterranean pact would have added strength if it were extended to Israel, and eventually to a more responsible Egypt than at present exists; and the hope will be that there will be no arrest in this neighborly diplomacy by the news of North Atlantic Association.

"Getting" Tobey

The worth of a man may be measured by the enemies he makes, and, judging by this yardstick, Senator Charles W. Tobey of New Hampshire, in our eyes, is a man of considerable merit. In the Republican primary he appears to have been opposed by a number of persons and groups outside New Hampshire who had either personal axes to grind or obligations to Senator Bridges to fulfill. His opponent was Wesley Powell, who resigned his job as administrative assistant to Senator Bridges to enter the race, and who came within a thousand-odd votes of winning. There is reason to think that in the end Mr. Powell's lavish expenditure of free dinners and what not had a boomerang effect on the thrifty people of New Hampshire. Be this as it may, Mr. Powell has not given up, but has submitted enough petitions to go into the elections as an independent.

Of course Mr. Powell has no more independence than Senator Bridges. He fought the primary on the issue that he was a regular Republican, meaning that he would not indulge, if elected, in the Tobey habit of judging every piece of legislation on its merits. This has been the reason that Senator Tobey has made his mark in the Senate—and in the country. He votes his convictions, and, if sometimes they do not jibe with GOP orders, so much the worse for those orders. This is the reason, moreover, that he has trodden on the toes of persons who are now trying to reciprocate. Mr. Powell would be more of a rubber stamp, not only for the extreme right-wing of the Republican Party, but also for his patrons from outside the State who seem to have financed his spectacular campaign. His backers are not so much interested in electing him as in "getting" Tobey, and this means they don't mind if they let in a Democrat. New Hampshire may see through the ruse as it did the free dinners, and act accordingly. The campaign in New Hampshire still holds the spotlight in the coming elections.

"California Tragedy"

I am a teacher in one of the universities in the United States and I prize my academic freedom above everything else. Your October 1 editorial "California Tragedy," is an excellent comment on the controversy over the principle of academic freedom at the University of California. I believe that any professor who is fit to be honored with the title of professor should refuse to sign anything arbitrarily promulgated by a board of regents. As pointed out in your editorial, the attitude of the regents of the University of California will bring ruin to the university.

I would like to emphasize that it is my belief that such attitudes on the part of boards of directors toward any group of leaders will ultimately lead to ruin of the institution where this is true. Freedom of thought is the most fundamental basis of progress in the fields of education, science and the humanities. I am proud of those professors who have the fortitude to refuse to sign a document which threatens to take away this freedom of thought from them.

Chiang's Backing

"Arlington Resident's" letter of October 1, regarding Chiang Kai-shek, smugly ascribes the generalissimo's loss of power in China to an insurrection which "had practically no outside support."

It is common knowledge that Soviet Russian agents—specially trained for this type of work—participated in the original organization of the Chinese Communist Party as a political unit within the South China government in Canton, in the early twenties. It was this organizational work on their part that paid off in 1927 when—despite Chiang's dismissal of his Russian advisers and his outlawing of Red influence in the Nationalist armies—the Chinese Communists were able to set up their own Soviet, with its own army, in Kiangsi Province.

After that, the Comintern, meeting in Moscow in September, 1928, adopted a lengthy resolution regarding its plan for the communization of certain countries in Asia. From authentic translations available, and judging by actual events since 1928, it is evident that the Kremlin has followed pretty faithfully the pattern laid down. This applies not only to China, but also to other countries, such as Indonesia and Indo-China.

What happened in Korea in recent months is not vastly different from what happened in China in the postwar years. The principal difference lies in the fact that in China the Russians got away with it, whereas in Korea they are failing. Other differences are (1) that in Korea the Russians could not and did not count on turning American public opinion against Syngman Rhee and his government, whereas, in China vigorous Communist propaganda succeeded in doing exactly that as far as Chiang and his government were concerned; (2) that in China, the Russians turned surrendered Japanese arms over to the Chinese Reds.

"Arlington Resident's" claim that Chiang had world-wide backing is incorrect. Let us be honest and admit that instead of receiving backing from us, he was backing us in the years 1937-41, holding in check a large Japanese war machine that would otherwise have been free to attack us. Let us remember that before Pearl Harbor, we were not backing Chiang; we were selling war supplies to the Japanese aggressors; and after the end of World War II, we stopped backing him, because we were told by his enemies—the Communists — that he and his government were undemocratic. If "Arlington Resident" had only followed the inside story of the Chinese Communist Party from the beginning—as some of us have been privileged to do—and if he had only perused the lists of "outsiders" who have figured so prominently in Red China's progress, he would not have made the statements in his letter.

The Catacombs

In a report from Vatican City entitled "Satellite Holy Year Worship Recalls Catacomba-Era Rites" in your issue of September 24, the Associated Press says:

"Catacombs are the underground network of tunnels and grottoes in and near Rome in which the early Christians hid from pagan persecutors, worshiped and were buried."

The statement is correct except for the word "hid" which repeats an old error. The underground galleries of the catacombs were dug and arranged for use as cemeteries by Jews, pagan Romans, and early Christians, but there was no hiding about it. The cemeteries were accessible to visitors and known to the police. Permit me to quote from an article by the Very Rev. Canon E. Venables:

"Another erroneous idea has only slowly retired before the increased historical research and scientific investigation which have been brought to bear on the construction of the Catacombs. This is, that these vast burial-places of the early Christians remained entirely concealed from the eyes of their pagan neighbors, and were constructed not only without the permission of the municipal authorities but without their cognizance.

"Nothing can be further from the truth. Such an idea is justly stigmatized by Mommsen as ridiculous, and reflecting a discredit as unfounded as it is unjust on the imperial police of the capital. That such vast excavations should have been made without attracting attention, and that such an immense number of corpses could have been carried to burial in perfect secrecy is utterly impossible.

"Nor was there any reason why secrecy should have been desired. The decent burial of the dead was a matter especially provided for by the Roman laws. No particular mode was prescribed. Interment was just as legal as cremation, and had, in fact, been universally practiced by the Romans until the later days of the republic. The bodies of the Scipios and Nasos were buried in still existing catacombs."

She Likes The Post

Thank you very much for your careful reporting on Fairfax County schools and county problems. I also enjoy your policy of serializing books. Some of them I would like to read but never would have time for otherwise. Some I would never even see—so my outlook is broadened! You certainly seem to be doing a good job in suiting all tastes.

Your crusading attitude toward social problems I like, too, and general reporting, and editorials. At times I get thoroughly disgusted with your emphasis on sex crimes and aberrations—it seems so out of character with the rest of the paper. However, that seems somewhat less lately. Does it take a war to put that in its proper place?

Old Order In Asia

Americans for Democratic Action tell us that the Asiatic peoples "have to be convinced that the United States is not trying to preserve its own riches or to support the old order." This will be difficult. A great, heavy, imperialistic pressure has always been on our Government to do just that. To hold the market in Asia regardless of the rights of the native peoples, to prop up governments no matter how false and futile to "support the old order."

In Italy, even so conservative a writer as Joseph Alsop says "Nothing has been done about the basic social and economic problems that confront Italy. Land reform is at least being discussed by the government, but only very tepidly, and as a direct result of Communist pressure. As for Italian overpopulation, widespread joblessness in the midst of prosperity, and the appalling disparity between rich and poor, these topics are not even being talked about." We won the elections in Italy.

In Asia there has been an even worse record. Marguerite Yancey, writing in The New York Times on her experiences in Korea as a member of the Women's Army Corps and an instructor in the Army's education program for occupation troops, says: "Our Korean labor group earned too little to buy rice."

Have we no humility whatever? As Korean cities burn, are we so entrenched in our own complacency and stupidity that we forget all the wisdom of the ages, and even Nature's law of compensation? Such words as "victory" and "triumph" used in connection with the horrors of Korea can only be revolting to any intelligent and humane person.

War's Ruthlessness

Perhaps after reading Mr. Renne's letter of October 1 on "Burning Villages," many Americans would be prone to agree with his opinions. On the other hand, surely Mr. Renne has heard these words before. All the Russian delegates to the U. N. have used them, but there is a difference. One source uses them purely for propaganda and others in search of the answer.

The writer asks, "Surely we who believe in justice cannot approve of our country's military ruthlessness in Korea whatever the excuse," and "can evil means achieve good ends?"

The answer to those statements cannot come from the State Department or Congress or even the White House, but only from the battle weary arsonists in Korea today. Ask the soldiers that fill up the wards of our military hospitals and an answer will come forth with little hesitation.

I once asked that same question that the writer asked and I got my answer on Leyte. The play was the same—war—only the cast differed. It was Japanese instead of North Koreans; it was in the Philippines not in Korea and the uniformed gunmen were, as now, Americans.

The Japs had been infiltrating the defense perimeter and cutting American throats at night. And one night some nervous sentries heard sounds near the outdoor kitchen site and remembering those incidents of past nights, didn't ask questions but blasted the site with everything they had. And when morning revealed the outcome it was evident to many Americans, especially fathers, just how ruthless a military action can be. For there on the ground lay the enemy, a Filipino boy of about 9 or 10 with a shining can of rations in each hand.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

We Shall Cross

TOKYO—It is now as certain certain world that the crossing of the thirty-eighth parallel by the South Koreans is only a first step. Eventually, the whole United Nations force must drive northward to stamp out the remaining North Korean resistance.

The logic of the situation demands it. Many signs indicate it. No inside information is needed to conclude that nothing can stop it, short of a direct restraining order from the American Administration or the United Nations to General of the Army Douglas MacArthur.

The original directive governing the United Nations war effort in Korea in fact permits the high command to finish the job here without asking for further authorization—which explains why the South Korean divisions have already been ordered to drive northward without delay. It is still a puzzle why the Washington and Lake Success leadership has run the shocking risk of seeming to shilly-shally about the issue of the parallel during these last 10 days. But no doubt it has been thought desirable to clothe the naked military decision to go north in a few wisps of pretty political gauze.

If this is the correct judgment of the situation here—and it is only a judgment—certain questions present themselves. First, it will be insane for the Chinese and/or the Soviets to intervene in Korea now in midcatastrophe, when the smallest, most easily disguised intervention two months ago would have won the war there and then. But suppose the Chinese and/or the Soviets are insane. What are their capabilities?

* * *

MUCH LESS than has been generally supposed, would seem to be the answer. The Chinese have two "armies" on the Yalu River, but these armies actually comprise only about 150,000 men, with no air power, feeble logistical support and other weaknesses. In eastern Siberia the Russians have ground, naval and air forces comprising about 500,000 men, while the Chinese also have other armies elsewhere in Manchuria.

These are powerful forces by any standard, but eastward of Lake Baikal their entire supply depends on the trans-Siberian railroad. The Chinese Communists have not yet been granted any important air force by their Russian masters because of the impossibility of supplying such an air force with aviation gasoline. Even a considerable number of the Russian air units are known to be restricted in their mere training operations by the same stringency. If training operations of air units must be restricted, it can be imagined what supply problems would arise if the whole vast military machine had to be put in motion.

These facts explain why the Soviet military dispositions in this part of the world have always been, and still are, purely defensive. And this is the final reason why the risk of outside intervention in the north is thought here to have been greatly exaggerated by panicky people.

To be sure, the appearance of indecision and timidity given by the Western powers must have tempted the Kremlin and Mao Tse-tung to test our doubtful courage. Assuming, however, that the North Koreans get no outside aid, the next question is, how much strength do the North Koreans themselves have left?

* * *

NOT VERY MUCH, appears to be the answer. In the southern fighting they are now considered to have lost nearly 200,000 men. North of the parallel they are believed to have left about 100,000. But these men who remain are mostly conscripts and trainees, with too few convinced Communist officers, and very few indeed of the real hard core units that gave us so much trouble in the south. Beyond doubt, there is a lot of dirty work still to be done, at the cost of further blood and treasure. But it should not be too long before the organized North Korean forces cease to exist.

Finally, when this happy day comes, how much guerilla trouble will there be?

Not very much, again appears to be the answer, providing the Rhee government is wise. The greatest sin of the newspaper trade in this fighting has been the continuous misuse of the word "guerilla." Quite literally, there have been no proven cases of true guerilla activity since the very early period of the Korean war. Everywhere behind the front, of course, infiltrators have always been at work; but these infiltrators never appeared more than 6 to 8 miles from the fighting line, and always belonged to the organized enemy divisions. There have also been a few cases of plain old-fashioned banditry. But nowhere has there been a serious effort by real guerillas—simple, seemingly innocent peasants who take rifles from the thatch and become fighting men.

No doubt some elements, perhaps quite considerable elements, of the disintegrated North Korean armies will now attempt the guerilla role. No doubt a guerilla base in Manchuria will also be set up. But the Yalu River is one of the most defensible frontiers in the world. And the joyful response to liberation by the Koreans who have actually experienced Communist domination suggests that guerillas this side of the Yalu will have little local sympathy and aid. Without this, they cannot long exist.

In short, it is not only probable that the Korean job will be carried through to a finish, the prospects are also fair for finishing the job in relatively short order, and in a relatively tidy way.

GOP Handbills Heckle Barkley In Wisconsin

OSHKOSH, Wis., Oct. 5 (U.P.).—Vice-President Alben W. Barkley, heckled by Young Republicans who distributed handbills to his audience, began a 15-State campaign tour today by asking for a Democratic Congress that will "co-operate" with President Truman.

The "veep" told an audience of 1500 in Monument Square that the current election campaign is "the most important in the history of the country" and warned against electing "a Congress that won't co-operate with the President like the 80th Congress."

Members of the Winnebago County Young Republicans Club moved among the crowd with handbills reading "Three Wars in Three Democratic Administrations."

Barkley commented that he would like "any Republican to answer 'What would a Republican Administration have done when the Japs attacked Pearl Harbor'?"

He praised the Administration's record in Korea and its origination of the Marshall Plan "to help governments fortify themselves against communism."

States to Get Guard Back

yet to serve will be given sergeants' stripes. Regular Army "buck" sergeants from other outfits will be moved in to become top sergeants. A complete replacement of qualified Regular Army or Reserve officers will arrive to take the jobs of the Guard officers. All Guardsmen then will be released.

4. Next, another battalion or regiment will repeat the process. The process will be spread over a period of time so that the division remains in some sort of fighting shape all the time. By the time the last battalions are being transferred, the first ones reorganized will have been brought back into a reasonable shape.

5. At that time, there's nothing left of National Guard Division X in Federal service, but the division's commander, its name, battle flags and guidon. A Regular Army general then will relieve the Guard division on chief, and change the unit's name to Regular Army Division Y. The Guard general then will return home to take command of the regiments which preceded him back into State service.

6. Guard Division X, back home after its year of training, once again will be at greatly reduced strength, but the important nucleus of officers, noncoms and some privates will be there—all in good shape after a year's active training. Filling up the ranks may be difficult until the 21-month draftees are discharged. Under the law they must enter the Guard or Reserve for a period of years.

Four Guard divisions, two separate regimental combat teams and many smaller units have been mobilized since the Korean trouble started.

Students to Continue Yenching U. Support

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 5 (AP)—The Student Christian Association of Princeton University today decided to continue its $1500 annual gift to Yenching University in Communist China.

"Keeping these contacts alive is more important than the Voice of America broadcasts, which cost considerable sums of money," Randolph C. Sailer, professor of psychology at Yenching, told the group. Sailer said a considerable amount of political and religious freedom exists at the university.

Table of Revised Government Pay Scales With Increased Withholding Tax Deducted

The new Federal tax law which became effective October 1 will take a bigger bite out of pay checks, including those of Federal workers.

The new and official salary table for Federal workers appears below. It's self-explanatory. Under it classified employes can tell what their net biweekly salary checks will be after retirement and new withholding tax deductions.

Capone Aides Cool Heels at Crime Inquiry

CHICAGO, Oct. 5 (U.P.).—Illinois Attorney General Ivan Elliott told the Senate Crime Investigating Committee today that the State received "little cooperation" from Western Union in attempts to stop race wire service to bookies.

Elliott said it appeared to be a matter of "no concern" to the telegraph agency that some operators in Illinois receiving race results were running gambling places.

He declared that Western Union might "hesitatingly" agree to stop service while public opinion is aroused, but later it will "reopen these lucrative lease arrangements."

Elliott made a statement to the committee as it opened a closed-hearing investigation into the Chicago underworld and its ramifications elsewhere in this area.

Greying, paunchy henchmen of the late Al Capone filed into the United States courthouse under committee subpenas to be questioned. But they cooled their heels in a witness room while the committee discussed crime problems with public officials and law enforcement officers.

Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.), chairman, was the only one of the five committee members present. But a surprise guest was Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.), who said Kefauver had invited him to attend while he was in town to make a speech.

Kefauver heard Police Commissioner John Prendergast and Sheriff Elmer Walsh tell how certain captains under their command drive swank cars, own expensive homes and even private airplanes.

The committee head said he would delve into the question of affluent police officers and whether they have any tieup with the underworld. But he said he had not heard evidence that such officers weren't trying to do an "honest" job of law enforcement.

Kefauver made public a list of 52 witnesses, most of them members of Chicago's racket "syndicate," who are still sought by the committee. They included Tony Accardo, reputed syndicate boss who fled to Mexico, and such other underworld luminaries as "Golf Bag" Sammy Hunt and Frank "Chew Tobacco" Ryan.

Kefauver used the opening session to deny again that the investigation is politically motivated.

Truman Nears Tangier Sound In Choppy Sea

ABOARD THE YACHT COMMANDER, WITH PRESIDENT TRUMAN, Oct. 5 (U.P.).—President Truman interrupted his "wonderful" vacation cruise on the Chesapeake Bay today to telephone Daughter Margaret and offer words of sympathy for her sore throat.

Mr. Truman made the long-distance call just before the Presidential yacht Williamsburg shoved off from the Yorktown, Va., naval anchorage for picturesque Tangier Sound. Miss Truman is suffering from an attack of laryngitis which forced her to cancel a scheduled concert.

The President obviously was enjoying his vacation despite winds that were expected to rise to 25 to 30 miles an hour by nightfall.

Mr. Truman rose at 5:45 a. m. and strolled around the deck of the Williamsburg for a short time in a driving rain. The rain stopped as the yacht moved out into the bay, but the sea was still choppy.

Capt. William J. Longfellow, commander of the Yorktown Naval Mine Depot, boarded the Williamsburg with a civilian employe William Wyatt. Wyatt had been fishing most of the night and had a basket of 30 rockfish for the President.

Mr. Truman posed for a photographer on the fantail of the Williamsburg and, on an impulse, called into the picture Seaman 1/c Carl R. Notti, Salt Lake City.

The President took a 45-minute stroll through the naval depot with Longfellow, stopping at one point to suggest that the Navy chapel would look better if it had a bigger steeple.

Five Scientific Groups Map Draft Plan

permit them to get professional or technical training.

After these deferred youths become "professionally capable," General Hershey would have them complete their "service tax" through serving society in some definite way.

Hershey urged that the draft be maintained within the 19-to-26 age group, because this group provided the most fit men, and he called for the lifting of draft exemptions from veterans and men with collateral dependents.

He warned that the exemptions would have to be lifted to meet the President's goal of three million men in the armed forces. He also warned that failure to draft veterans might result in future inability of the armed forces to organize reserve units. Reservists have been called up in the current emergency regardless of their previous military service.

The draft deferment plan of the five committees—covering the fields of agriculture and biology, engineering, physical sciences, social sciences and the humanities—is the result of two years' discussion and study.

The committees were established by General Hershey two years ago to advise him on Selective Service policy. They met here Wednesday and yesterday in an unpublicized joint session, under the chairmanship of Dr. M. H. Trytten, director, Office of Scientific Personnel, National Research Council.

Most of the 25 committee members, along with General Hershey, will participate in the conference on "Higher Education in National Service," which opens here today under the auspices of the American Council on Education.

Draft and manpower policy is one of the major topics of the meeting. Dr. Trytten will serve as chairman of the conference's manpower utilization section.

Symington, who heads the National Security Resources Board, told the mayors yesterday that he feels scientists should be exempted from military service, and that cities should be protected from loss of police and firemen in view of the threat of atomic attack.

The Army yesterday disclosed that the draftee rejection rate fell to 48.8 percent in August. It was 55.2 percent in July.

Wacs and Army Nurses Recalled to Service

FORT MEADE, Md., Oct. 5 (AP). Orders have gone out for the first involuntary recall to active duty of women organized reserve members in the Second Army area, headquarters here announced today.

About 300 Wac's, Army nurses and medical specialists will be back in uniform by the end of November. That is the Second Army quota under a recent Nation-wide Army request for 1644 women reservists. Headquarters said orders have gone out for 200 enlisted Wac's and 32 officers to report for physical examinations October 16 and 17. Of these, 26 officers and 127 enlisted women will be recalled to duty by November 15.

Clear color photographs of the human eardrum have been produced by a Georgetown University specialist.

Perfected for the medical training of students, they are proving even more interesting to practicing physicians who admittedly scarcely recognized before what they saw in professional peaks into patients' ears.

At least that's what Dr. Irvin Hantman found out when he exhibited the photographs at the recent twenty-first annual scientific assembly of the District Medical Society.

Dr. Hantman, assistant professor of otolaryngology at the GU Medical School, said he was able to produce the color pictures by his own modification of a standard surgical camera. His contribution to medical photography is a variable focusing device to accommodate picture-taking down the ear cavity.

Of interest to pediatricians, he explained, is the "virus" ear, in which the eardrum blisters on its outer membrane. Unless the pediatrician knows beforehand what it looks like, the "virus" ear can readily be mistaken for a more dangerous condition, abscess in the middle ear.

The "virus" ear, as its name implies, occurs in children suffering virus diseases. Blisters on the eardrums are not considered dangerous and disappear in self-healing, Dr. Hantman said. Inflammation and pus formation in the middle ear, however, must be treated.

The difficulty is in identification, Dr. Hantman said.

He uses a simple test to differentiate. If the eardrum bulge "gives" to the touch of a blunt probe, it's a virus blister. If it's unyielding, dangerous internal pressure is bulging the drum outward, and special care is needed.

Cancer-Killer Glass Beads Developed

Atomic energy biologists have succeeded in incorporating powerful radioisotopes into miniature glass beads, it was reported yesterday.

The feat encourages that field of cancer treatment research aimed at "seeding" tumors with radiation-emitting particles to destroy abnormal cell growth.

Drs. Walter Kisieleski, George Svihla and Austin M. Brues, of the biology division, Argonne National Laboratory, Chicago, reported their success in radioactive bead production in the current issue of Science, weekly publication of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

The radioactive beads were made, they reported, by precipitating a radioactive isotope over powdered glass and then fusing the powder to form the beads. Some of the beads were pinpoint in size.

As an example of what might be expected in anti-cancer use of the beads, the research workers noted that such radiation sources proved capable of killing tissue areas of calculable size when implanted in living rat liver. This was accomplished in 48 hours with minimal radiation damage to tissues bordering the predetermined area, they said.

Intensely radioactive isotopes of yttrium, strontium and cerium, all rare-earth metals, were incorporated into beads in separate batches, they reported.

It shows the number of new cases reported last week, those recorded during the corresponding week of last year, the 1950 polio "disease" year totals to last Saturday, and the 1949 figures for the same period.

Polio Declines For First Week Since May 20

The first drop in weekly totals of new cases of infantile paralysis since polio began its seasonal rise on May 20 was reported for the Nation yesterday.

The national decrease was reflected in last week's polio totals for the District, Maryland and Virginia.

Public Health Service statisticians yesterday reported there were 1994 new cases recorded throughout the Nation last week, a drop of 176, or 8 percent, from the previous week's figure of 2170 cases.

Public Health Service polio scorekeepers reported the cumulative total for the current "disease" year (begun in mid-March) as 20,405 new cases. For the corresponding period in 1949, the total was 32,204.

States reporting the largest number of new cases last week were New York, 331; Ohio, 159; Michigan, 152; Illinois, 130; Pennsylvania, 118, and Texas, 92.

The District of Columbia recorded 14 new cases, two less than its previous week's total. Maryland had 47 cases for the week, compared to 71 the previous week, and Virginia had 61, compared to 75.

Eight of Maryland's cases were reported from counties adjoining Washington. Of these, seven were in Montgomery County and one in Prince Georges County.

Three of Virginia's 61 cases for the week were from nearby areas. They included one case in Arlington County and two from Fairfax County.

4 New Polio Cases Listed, 2 Each in D. C., Nearby Area

Two new cases of infantile paralysis, the first since Monday, were reported in the District yesterday.

From neighboring counties, two other new cases were recorded, one in Alexandria, Va., the other in Montgomery County, Md.

The District cases included a 20-month-old boy of the 1500 block of Simms dr. se., confined to his home, and a 16-year-old girl of the 1100 block of Florida ave. nw., admitted Wednesday to Children's Hospital. They increased to 151 the number of polio cases in the District this year.

Yesterday's Alexandria case was recorded at Children's Hospital with the diagnosis as polio of the illness of a 7-year-old girl taken there Tuesday from her home in the 1100 block of Beverley dr., Alexandria. She was Alexandria's twelfth polio victim of this year.

Special Mark Used To Honor U. N. Day

NEW YORK, Oct. 5 (U.P.).—Postage stamps were cancelled for the first time today with a special mark honoring United Nations Day on October 24.

The cancellation reads: "U. N. for peace, October 24, 1950, United Nations Day."

Postmaster Albert Goldman said the specially cancelled letters will be of special interest to stamp collectors because previously U. N. cancellation marks had not been permitted in the mails.

Bank Loans Here Continue Record Climb

By S. Oliver Goodman

Loans of the 17 Federal Reserve member banks in Washington leaped $5,218,000 in the week ended September 27 and reached an all-time peak of $287,281,000.

The total on the latest date was 22 percent above the level of a year ago, according to figures supplied by the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond.

For the Fifth District as a whole, loans advanced more than 11 million dollars during the week and reached a record of $1,062,232,000, about 26 percent higher than a year ago.

Locally, loans to business during the week rose $2,030,000 to an aggregate of $119,792,000. Real estate loans of $96,375,000 showed little change from $96,116,000 in the previous week.

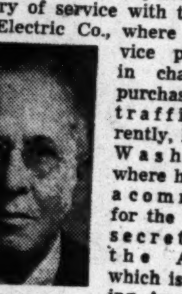
Surprisingly, loans for purchasing and carrying securities fell back to $5,161,000 from $5,435,000.

The biggest advance here came in "loans for other purposes." This category jumped to $68,016,000 from $64,818,000. Consumer loans are the biggest item in this item.

Demand deposits of the local banks dropped to $814,155,000 as of September 27, off about eight million dollars from the previous week. Time deposits of $177,286,000, were off slightly.

REUNION: Ninety alumni of the Chevrolet Dealers Sons School from the Eastern region attended a reunion luncheon yesterday at the Statler Hotel here. T. O. McLaughlin, dean of the Detroit industrial school, was on hand to greet his former students. Alumni total 1010 since the unique school was founded in 1938.

PERSONALITY: Harry L. Erlicher this week completed a half century of service with the General Electric Co., where he is a vice president in charge of purchasing and traffic. Currently, he is in Washington where he heads a committee for the Undersecretary of the Army which is studying Army supply methods.



Erlicher

Fantastic is the way many a GE official describes Erlicher's wide circle of friends in all parts of the country. With characteristic modesty, Erlicher says: "We purchase such an endless variety of materials from more than 31,000 suppliers that a purchasing man like me can't help but know a lot of people." Far more of the reason is Erlicher himself. He likes people, listens to people, understands people.

Steels Higher, General List Edges Lower

NEW YORK, Oct. 5 (AP).—Stocks tried valiantly to get ahead today under the leadership of motors and steels, but the market full victim to last-minute selling that forced losses running to around a dollar a share.

Steels alone stood higher among the major groups. Motors were unchanged. Lower were rails, oils, metals, motion pictures and utilities.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks fell back 50 cents to $84. The industrial component was off 50 cents, rails 80 cents, and utilities 30 cents.

The volume of business was 2,490,000 shares, a contraction from yesterday's 2,920,000 shares when the market was advancing briskly.

General Motors headed the list of most active issues and closed unchanged at 53⅜. At one time it reached 54¾ before falling back.

Pepsi-Cola was second on the list up ¼ at 9⅞, still feeling those reports of retail price increases.

United States Steel was third up ⅛ at 38⅞. Jones & Laughlin, in fourth place, advanced a healthy 2⅛ to 42⅞. Armco Steel was up ⅞ at 43¼.

Curtiss-Wright was fifth, up ⅝ at 10, after reports that it has concluded a deal with the Armstrong Siddeley group of Britain to make British jet and turboprop engines here.

Chrysler, Packard and Studebaker all were unchanged at the close after running up advances of as much as 1⅛ during the day.

Chicago Grain

CHICAGO, Oct. 5 (AP).—Corn made the only price change of even minor importance on the Board of Trade today, sinking around a cent on steady commission house selling.

At one time all the rest of the market was down, too. But soybeans staged a mild rally on short-covering just before the close, winding up with fractional gains. Rye made a fair-sized advance. Lard showed a little more stability than in recent sessions.

Wheat closed unchanged to 1 cent lower; corn, ⅞ to 1⅜ lower; oats, unchanged to ⅜ lower; rye, 1⅛ to 1½ higher; soybeans, ¼ to ¾ higher, and lard, 8 cents lower to 18 cents a hundred pounds higher.

New York Cotton

NEW YORK, Oct. 5 (AP).—Cotton futures climbed steadily today under the impetus of active mill buying and short covering. Final prices were 90 cents to $2.90 a bale higher. Lower crop ideas and firmness in spot cotton were the supporting influences. With the next Government estimate of 1950 cotton crop coming up October 9, mills decided to cover contracts more aggressively against textile sales.

British View of U. S.: Speed, Superselling and Night Shifts

By J. A. Livingston

AMERICA, seen through the eyes of Britons, is not so very different from America as seen by Americans. This is still the land of speed, supersalesmanship, mass production, and a rising and materialistic standard of living.

That's the unanimous conclusion of ten men from the British pressed metal industry who have just reported on how this country goes about making auto fenders, refrigerator cabinets, milk cans, and so on, in contrast to their own methods. Our whole way of life is geared to mass production, whereas in Britain, which is to say Europe, mass production is tethered by conservatism.

Livingston

In Great Britain, after a manufacturer gets an idea for a product, he starts making it in small quantities. "Goods are put on sale to test the market reaction. If this is good, then there is frequently a long delay for the necessary tooling and equipment." By that time the manufacturer may have missed his market.

American manufacturers reverse the process. They first deside on a design. Preparations are then made for mass production. "When large quantities are available, the sales organization comes into forceful action. The consumer is persuaded by high pressure advertising and salesmanship to purchase the latest type of refrigerator, car, washing machine, or whatever product is being offered. The American generally seems to be far more desirous of possessing the latest possible model than does the Englishman, who is more often inclined, when he buys a car or a refrigerator, to look upon it as a long-term investment."

This out-with-the-old-in-with-the-new characteristic applies to manufacturers as well as to consumers. The report says: "American plans were found to be much more up to date with their equipment. The rate of obsolescence is much faster than in British plants, owing, in part, to the American industrialist's insistence on having the very latest equipment.

* * *

"THE AMERICAN will not use a machine if it is possible to buy one which will give him a cheaper (less costly) product." But the British find that Americans do not take the same care of equipment as they, themselves, do. Rather, American machines are "worked to full capacity for a short life and then replaced."

The members of the team, several of whom were workers and one of whom was a union official, agreed that the quest for a constantly higher standard of living drove American workers on to higher and higher productivity. "Within reach of the spending power of the majority is a wide range of cars, radios, television sets, refrigerators, etc.

"This is an extremely important factor in the high effort generally expended by American workers. The simple fact is that they have more money to spend and more goods on which to spend it (than British workers)." Here the report refers not only to high taxes in Britain but also to the continued scarcity of goods.

In regard to safety, the British approach is far different from the American: "In Britain we insist on every tool and press being made as near foolproof as possible. In America the main emphasis is laid on educating the operators (of machines) in care. In many plants there was a complete lack of guarding, as understood in Britain, and estimates made by members of the group indicate that in certain press operations the effect was an added productivity of 20 percent."

* * *

THE UNITED STATES accent on speed, the report said, produces specialized, but less-rounded, workers: "Generally production operations are split to such fine limits that practically all skill is taken out of the job. The American worker, therefore, is extremely adept at one specific operation, but would not in the main be as versatile as his British counterpart."

Finally, the Britons paid their respects to the way America has adjusted to the business necessities of two- and three-shift operations. "In industrial towns, the organization of social life averts the inconveniences of what would be regarded in Britain as the awkward hours of the three-shift scheme. Cinemas, places of amusement, cafeterias and restaurants are open until the early hours of the morning. Similarly, big sporting events, such as baseball games, take place both during afternoons and late evenings. The shift worker can, therefore, share the amenities afforded to the man on a day shift."

Betty Betz, as hinted the other matinee, will be the house guest over the weekend of Philly publisher W. Annenberg's family. Betty's annulment is due any day They were spotted inspecting betrothal sparklers at Tiffany's . . . Inez Robb's eyebrow raiser, "Girl Gangs," in Cosmopolitan shocked the Kansas City Star, which spurned the page ads exploiting the article. Kansas City, where Kefauver's crime probers found no sin! . . . "Goodnight, Irene," corniest of the earaches, has sold over 500,000 sheet music copies and 1,250,000 records.

G-Man Hoover is nursing a new and long list of atomic spies. Came out of the coast arrest of Wm. Weisband. That pinch has local Communists jittery . . . Marjorie Gateson, who co-stars with Bert Lytell in "One Man's Family," is being written out of the troupe because of illness . . . Millionaire F. Vanderbilt Field this week registered as a foreign agent representing Red China interests. His link was recorded here deadlines ago under the title: "Capitalistic Communists" . . . The Canadian dollar, which financial experts there predicted wouldn't go higher for a long time (following our tip that it was upping), has tilted to nearly 95c. As ex-Ambassador J. P. Kennedy, the zillionaire, once wisely observed about stock market tipsters: "With a little inside information you can go broke twice as fast!" . . . Avon Long, the actor, also listed in "Red Channels," requests that we report he isn't the A. L. itemed as having fled the country. Oh, well, that's one way of getting your name syndicated . . . Lowell Thomas, jr's book on Tibet, "Out of This World," (Greystone) reports: "Polyandry is common in Tibet among nomad males. When a girl weds one she is automatically married to all his younger brothers with 'all privileges' until they marry and start their own tribes" . . . From Crowther's thesis in the Sabbath N. Y. Times: "A comedian of the stature of Chaplin in his earlier days or a drama of classic proportions may entertain the whole world, but that's all." That's all? Hmf, hardly worth the effort . . . If you want to witness acting, then see the Jane Wyman-Kirk Douglas candlelight scene in "The Glass Menagerie" . . . Lee Tracy reports all is Honky Dooly with "21" . . . Why some producers have headaches: Merman's gowns in "Madam" cost $11.000.

Life's affectionate article by Carl Mydans about Herald Tribune war correspondent Marguerite Higgins ("Maggie wears mud like other women wear makeup") reminds us of the time the late Alexander Woollcott covered the war in 1917 . . . The plump Woollcott arrived in the most bizarre get-up this side of a Mardi Gras . . . His uniform fit him like a sack—he wore a frying pan strapped around his ample middle—and his shoulders were always draped with a shawl . . . A GI who spotted him waddling up to the front lines let out a roar: "Fevvensakes! Now they're drafting grandmothers!"

They are still imitating I. Berlin, the master, whose many song hits include "White Christmas." Now there's a ditty tagged "Blue Christmas." Some switch . . . M. Todd is too busy these nights counting the almost $52,000 "Peep Show" weeks (at the Winter Garden) to be concerned about the critical scoldings it got. His "Follies Bergere" photos of the girls (out front) are as good as money . . . "Season in the Sun" is a big hit for all concerned. Burgess Meredith (saluted as its director) recently laid an omelet with "Happy as Larry." Clever leading lady Nancy Kelly's last flop was "The Big Knife" and leading man Richard Whorf, embraced in the male lead, died with "Richard III" . . . NBC's "The Greatest Show on the Air" debuts on the 29th at 6:30. The network doesn't care if it loses a mint so long as it's good . . . Add show-off reporting: J. Barkham's book review in the Times: "a more lapidary novelist." He means polished or skillful . . . Then there's the Mirror's Nick Kenny, who resigned from the common people by using "obfuscation." The poor man means obscuring.

Hal Bloch, the quip-snapper for the movie and radio stars, has an entertaining piece in Collier's on How It's Done . . . It winds up: "John Barrymore was particularly difficult from a writer's standpoint. Once we had a rousing argument over a line I had written, and finally I said: 'Look, the theater is your medium and radio is mine. Who are you not to like the line I wrote?' . . . Barrymore, in surprise, replied: 'Who do you have to be?' "

As Oscar Levant was quoted here 1000 years ago.

"⅝ Smith" and "Quarrelsome Smith"

Smiths Susceptible to Fancy First Names

EDITOR'S NOTE: America's Number One humorist here tells the riotous story of America's Number One family—the Smiths. H. Allen Smith is the author of "Low Man on a Totem Pole" and "We Went Thataway." This is the fifth of six articles from the book, "People Named Smith," published this week by Doubleday & Co.

By H. Allen Smith

CHAPTER FIVE

Early in the nineteenth century Sydney Smith, the great English wit, recognized the difficulties confronting a Smith afflicted with a common baptismal name.

He named his daughter Saba, after a king mentioned in the 72d Psalm, on the theory that anyone with a surname of Smith ought to have an uncommon given name by way of compensation. We will find more striking examples of this theory at work as we go along.

Mr. ⅝ Smith

For the present, let us look at ⅝ Smith, a respected citizen of Pearson, Ga. ⅝ is a person of some prominence in Pearson, being a member of the City Council, owner of a jewelry store, owner of a farm and operator of a plant which produces concrete blocks.

He was born in Dupont, Ga., in 1912, the son of a man named Frank Smith who was fed up with being mistaken for other men named Frank Smith (there were five other Frank Smiths in Dupont alone.)

When his son was born, Frank Smith sat down and considered the problem, thought of all the confusions and embarrassments he had suffered because of his name. The more he thought about it the more determined he became that his son should have a first name the like of which no other mortal on earth possessed. In the end he chose ⅝.

Not Five-Eighths, spelled out, but ⅝ Smith. In the interests of accuracy it must be reported that while everyone else calls him ⅝, while he gets his mail in that name and pays his taxes as ⅝ Smith, his wife calls him Willie.

A Name With a Story

His given name has its opposites in the matter of length. A Negro child born during a flood was named William McKinley Louisiana Levee Bust Smith.

In 1901 a boy born in Oklahoma was baptized Loyal Lodge No. 296 Knights of Pythias Ponca City Oklahoma Smith.

Xenophon P. Smith is head of the Peoria Public Library system. I have seen a picture of him and he doesn't look like anyone who would be named Xenophon P. Smith.

Another note concerns Zemro Smith, who was a leading editorial writer in Indianapolis years ago.

There have been several Smiths christened with a first name that seems singularly appropriate—Increase Smith.

The father of a Michigan Congressman was named Wanton Smith. Somewhere in the jungles of the Belgian Congo there is, or was, an old drum master, skilled in the use of that instrument as a means of communication, named Quarrelsome Smith.

One Lung Smith was a character in the Chicago underworld years ago. Fox Smith was the name of a "sea poetess" in England. Ulysses Grant Smith was a top diplomat for many years and Paul Revere Smith is prominent in New York society.

Dean Young Smith

Young Smith is dean of the Columbia School of Law and then there is Nevada Smith. Nevada Smith is not a cowboy (that's Whispering) but one of the most publicized of New York's showgirls. She brought considerable honor to the clan when Earl Wilson, the Watchdog of Broadway, put her on his list of the best-busted women in America.

Erasmus Peshine Smith was an international lawyer and diplomat. He invented the word "telegram." Think of how it would be if he hadn't.

My alma mater would not have been the World-Telegram, for the Telegram wouldn't have been the Telegram when it absorbed the World, but perhaps would have been the Sun, and the Sun would have been something else, maybe the Herald, and things would have been so balled up generally that the Herald-Tribune today would be known as the Journal-American, and the Journal-American the War Cry, and the paper we know as the World-Telegram and Sun might have wound up as the New York Daily Peshine.

A man bearing the interesting name of Coffin Smith was a character around Exeter, N. H., some years ago. Coffin was well-to-do and particular about what he ate.

In his old age he had a daily routine. Each morning he called at the homes of each of his six children in Exeter, inquired about the menu for dinner, arrived back at his own house, sat down and considered, and then chose the one he would eat with that evening.

Near Hartford, Conn., is a house that was once occupied by a Sandemanian (Glassite) minister named Sephaniah Smith. Sephaniah had an eccentric wife named Hannah and five eccentric daughters bearing the interesting names of Hancy Zephinia, Cyrinthia Sacretia, Laurilla Aleroyla, Julia Evelina and Abby Hadassah.

These females are said to have been the first of their sex to champion the abolitionist cause and, later, the cause of woman's suffrage.

Hannah's Glass Cage

Hannah, the mother, was a great one to read and she had a big glass cage built in her yard so she could sit inside it and enjoy the sun while she read, without being distracted by the noise made by her five daughters.

Of the daughters, Abby Hadassah Smith became the most celebrated. She grew up to become an even more militant foe of taxation methods than her modern Connecticut counterpart, Vivien Kellems.

Abby got into a sweat because she had to pay a road tax twice, so she struck against taxes. At the age of seventy-six, after her cattle had been seized and sold to satisfy a tax judgement, she wrote a book called Abby Smith and Her Cows.

That book was to taxation what "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was to slavery and for quite a while people everywhere, inspired by Abby's example, were chasing tax collectors with sharp hatchets.

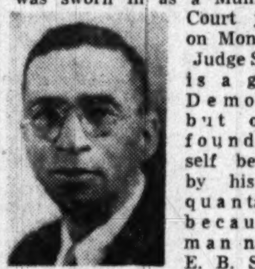
Wrong E. B. Smith Gave Him Trouble

Bearing the name of Smith can have its disadvantages, according to Emory B. Smith, who was sworn in as a Municipal Court judge on Monday.



Emory B. Smith

Judge Smith is a good Democrat, but once found himself berated by his acquantances because a man named E. B. Smith had written to a newspaper to complain bitterly of the Democratic administration.

The new judge, then a lawyer, had to do a lot of explaining before he convinced everyone that it was just one of those things that come with bearing the name Smith. At any rate, he got to be a judge anyway, and with the backing of the Democratic Party.

"Being a Smith is all right," he said. "I've never been anything else."

Delay Asked In FCC's TV Color Ruling

Radio Corporation of America and Motorola, Inc., asked the Federal Communications Commission yesterday to postpone a final decision on color television.

The commission has asked manufacturers to start producing this fall sets capable of receiving both regular black-and-white and the Columbia Broadcasting System color transmission in black and white.

The FCC said that if the manufacturers agreed to the proposal, it would authorize the CBS color system on a tentative basis only and look over other color systems.

If the manufacturers do not agree to the proposal, the commission will authorize the CBS system immediately. Nearly all manufacturers have rejected the proposal.

RCA asked the commission to put off its final decision until next June to give it more time for improvements in experimental system. It said its system, which has been rejected by the FCC, would be ready for commercialization by that time.

Motorola asked the commission to hold more hearings on the question. It said it apparently is "impossible" to meet the time schedule laid down by FCC.

Arlington Pilot Escapes 2d Crash

QUONSET POINT, R. I., Oct. 5 (U.P.).—For the second time in five months, Ensign Frank E. Specht of Arlington, Va., has escaped without serious injury from plane crashes.

Specht's Bearcat fighter plane crashed and burned yesterday as he came in for a landing at the Naval Air Station here. He walked away from the burning wreckage, suffering only minor burns and slight shock.

Last May he crashed in another fighter plane in the ocean off Massachusetts, but swam clear of the wreckage and was picked up by a boat.

Woman Critically Hurt In Fall of 4 Stories

Mrs. Hattie Louise Lester, 27, was in critical condition at Freedman's Hospital last night after a four-story fall from a window of her home, 634 N st. nw.

Police said Mrs. Lester had been locked in her room by her husband, and attempted to lower herself to a third floor. She plunged to the ground when the blankets she had tied together came apart.

WHOM, New York

Radio Station Talks In Many Tongues

By John Crosby

THIS WILL PROBABLY surprise you. There are 126 radio stations ranging over 30 of the United States which broadcast a total of 314 programs in foreign languages. In not just the well known foreign languages, either. There are 26 foreign languages spoken on the American air, including Arabic and Chinese.

Crosby

Of all the radio stations specializing in foreign-language broadcasts, probably the best known and certainly the most successful is WHOM in New York. WHOM talks seven languages — Italian, Polish, Yiddish, German, Russian, Spanish and English.

Fortune Pope, eldest son of the late Generoso Pope, who runs the station, has made the foreign language field pay—you will excuse the expression—money and lots of it.

WHOM is on the air 20 hours a day, 17 hours of which is in some foreign language. It is far and away the leader in its field, broadcasting 120 hours of the 1000 hours of foreign language programs in this country. The Pope family took over the 5000-watt independent station in 1946 and instantly made drastic changes.

At the time, WHOM was half-English, half-foreign language. Pope made it almost entirely a foreign language station. WHOM now has a Polish "Arthur Godfrey," a German "Mary Margaret McBride," an Italian "Duffy's Tavern," and a "Jewish Mediation Board."

As far as the Federal Communications Commission is concerned, WHOM is a model station among independents. The FCC has tried in vain for years to persuade the independents to devote more of their time to public service and to live programs. WHOM does both and has found it good business. Of their Italian language programs, for instance, almost five hours a day are live, while only two-and-a-quarter are recorded.

ITS PUUBLIC SERVICE schedule again is a shrewd mixture of good ethics and good business. It broadcasts daily news shows to its specialized group of Italian-born from Rome and puts special emphasis on such holidays as Kosciusko Day, Pulaski Day, Columbus Day and various Jewish holidays, as well as public events of more general interest.

WHOM has always tackled emergencies as if they were specifically the responsibility of the station. A couple of years back when New York had a smallpox scare and the citizenry were dashing back to their doctors to get vaccinated, WHOM not only broadcast the alarm in its many tongues, but invited the listeners to drop in for vaccinations. The station immunized 2200 of its listeners.

WHOM'S success has raised the prestige of the whole foreign-language broadcast field to the point where national advertisers are getting more and more interested in sponsorship. The station recently concluded a deal which is unique in broadcasting. It is the only station in America which owns a program sponsored by a Wall Street brokerage firm which explains what's happening in the stock market in Italian.

Judge Denies Damages in Covenanted Home Sale

$42,000 Suit by Six Property Owners Thrown Out; Ruling Of High Court Cited

Damages cannot be collected from a home owner who sells his property in violation of racial restriction covenants, Judge Alexander Holtzoff ruled yesterday.

Judge Holtzoff made his ruling under two recent Supreme Court decisions stating that although racial covenants may be "valid," the courts will not enforce them because of public policy.

He threw out a $42,000 suit brought by six property owners in the 4000 block of 5th st. nw. They sought to collect from Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. Curtis of Woodmore, Md., who sold their home at 4004 5th st. nw. to Mr. and William H. Hightower, Negroes, on April 14.

Covenant Breach Charged

Through Attorney John H. Connaughton, former president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, the plaintiffs charged that this breached a restrictive covenant of 1946 and reduced the sale value of their own homes. White persons were unwilling to buy in the area as a result of the Curtis sale, they said.

Mr. and Mrs. Curtis replied through Attorney Harry W. Goldberg that they had tried without success to sell to white persons. Also, they claimed that within one block of the home in the Petworth section, Negroes were already residing.

THE FEDERAL DIARY appears Today on Page 23.

Connaughton argued that no action was sought against the Negroes in possession but only a contract breach action against the Curtises. There is no constitutional prohibition against this, Connaughton declared.

Court Rulings Held Controlling

Judge Holtzoff agreed that the Supreme Court covenant decisions appeared "anomolous" but declared they were controlling.

He stated:

"This is an action for damages for breach of a restrictive covenant not to sell real property to members of the colored race.

"While previously such covenants were regarded as valid and enforceable in the courts, the Supreme Court recently in two cases revised and overruled the prior rule of law applicable to these covenants. The Supreme Court held that such agreements are not invalid so long as their purposes are achieved by voluntary adherence to their terms.

"But the Supreme Court further held that the covenants are contrary to the 14th and 15th Amendments to the Constitution and also that it is contrary to public policy to aid in the enforcement of such covenants by judicial proceedings.

"It is true that the actions involved there were for injunctions but the ruling is broad enough to cover actions for damages as well.

"I construe the decisions to withhold judicial assistance in any manner on these covenants. In view of the circumstances and this line of reasoning which seems to be inescapable, the motion to dismiss will be granted."

Connaughton said he is considering an appeal. He said he is supported by a recent decision of the Missouri Supreme Court on similar suits.

Tauxemont Area Residents Should Use Memorial Hwy. for Fast Trip Downtown

Have you wondered whether you are taking the quickest route to work? TRAFFIC TRICKS, recommended routes developed from the Regional Highway Planning Survey of Metropolitan Washington, has the answer on the fast way to get to the intersection of 14th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw. or the Capitol.

RESIDENTS of Tauxemont, Belle Haven, Haven, Hollin Hills, Marlin Forest and Spring Bank, Va., should take this route—

From the intersection of Fort Hunt rd. and Alexandria ave. at Tauxemont, take Alexandria ave. over Mount Vernon Memorial hwy. and left into the highway, take a right on the highway, going past Hunting creek, through South and North Washington st. and into Memorial hwy., cross the East Highway (14th st.) bridge and continue up 14th st. to Pennsylvania ave. nw.

The average peak traffic time is 28.8 minutes for the 11.8 mile distance. From the starting intersection, it should take 22.5 minutes to the bridge.

OTHER ROUTE: Take Fort Hunt rd., right on Route 1 past Hunting Creek into South Patrick st., left one block on Gibson st., right on South and North Henry st., take a left and cross the railroad overpass at Monroe ave., right on River rd., through the Jefferson Davis hwy., cross the East Highway (14th st.) bridge and continue up 14th st. to Pennsylvania ave. Time: 29.2 minutes for the 11.3 mile distance; 23.5 minutes to the bridge.

The recommended route to the Capitol is via Mount Vernon hwy. as listed in the first route, right on Independence ave. after coming up 14th st. from the East Highway bridge. Time: 31.6 minutes for the 12.5 mile distance. Using the Route 1 truck route over D st., Maryland ave., C st., Maryland ave. and Independence would be the same distance and take about the same time.

Gaming Raid Follows 8-Day Police Vigil

Vice Squad Takes Two Men, Seizes Numbers Slips

After keeping the basement quarters at 1926 S st. se., under observation for eight days, vice squad detectives walked in yesterday and arrested two men on gaming charges.

Lieut. Roy Blick, vice squad head, said his men made the raid without a warrant.

Blick reported that after his men entered they arrested Charles E. Higgs, 32, of 4305 Wheeler rd. se. While there, Blick added, his men answered the telephone and accepted several numbers bets.

Before the detectives departed, Alfred W. Fairall, 33, of the S st. address, entered and he, too, was arrested. Blick said the detectives confiscated a large quantity of small change, numbers and horse bet slips, a radio and an adding machine.

Fairall was charged with operating a lottery, possession of lottery slips, setting up a gaming table, and permitting gaming. Higgs was charged with operating and possession.

The men were freed in $1500 bond each for a hearing November 15 by United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence.

Housewife Is Jailed On Lottery Charge

An Alexandria housewife was sentenced to 90 days in jail and fined $300 in Alexandria Police Court yesterday for what police said was her fourth conviction for gambling.

The sentence was imposed by Judge James R. Duncan on Mrs. Lillian Davis, 41, of 908 Queen st., arrested at her home Wednesday on a charge of operating a lottery. She appealed the verdict to the Corporation Court, but was remanded to jail in lieu of $1500 bond.

Mrs. Davis was arrested by Detective Robert Jones and Policemen George May and Clarence Wilkinson, who said they found a quantity of numbers slips in her home.

Navy Reservists To Start Harbor Defense Training

The destroyer escort, USS Robert F. Keller and the Patrol Craft No. 1168 from the Potomac River Naval Command leave Washington this morning to join other units at Norfolk, for harbor defense exercises this weekend.

Approximately 100 area Naval reservists under Lieut. Comdr. William M. Robinson, assistant director of the Naval Reserve in this area, will participate.

The maneuvers, the second of a series conducted by the Norfolk Naval area, will consist of a simulated air, surface and submarine attack on Hampton Roads. The armed services from sections of the Eastern seaboard will join in the operation.

The Washington ships participating in the defense will return to the Gun Factory Sunday afternoon.

Annex Assured

Hyattsville Church Wins Zone Fight

The Hyattsville Presbyterian Church last night won its year-long struggle for permission to complete its Sunday School annex on the church property at 42d ave. and Farragut st.

The long zoning dispute which brewed political repercussions came to a close when the Prince Georges County Board of Zoning Appeals waived a regulation forbidding construction less than 25 feet from a property line.

The new church structure, for which a permit was issued and later withdrawn, comes to within 13 feet of the property line.

Sitting in the County Service Building, the board acted after hearing T. Hammond Welsh, jr., withdraw his father's objection.

Welsh, sr., a Prince Georges County commissioner and owner of property adjoining the construction, lodged the complaint upon which the Maryland-National Park and Planning Commission revoked the permit.

The church had already spent $4200 on the annex when the permit was revoked. The total cost of the structure will be about $14,000.

Immediately after the board's decision, William E. Roll, chairman of the church's building council, issued a statement to the press which read in part as follows:

"Mr T. Hammond Welsh withdrew his objection to the construction as a result of discussions held between the building council and Mr. Welsh. The building council wishes to acknowledge publicly its appreciation to him for his cooperation.

"The congregation of the church, recognizing its eventual need for Mr. Welsh's property for its additional church facilities, authorized the officers of the church to negotiate with Mr. Welsh for the purchase of his property. These negotiations resulted in Mr. Welsh agreeing to sell the property to the church for a figure which the church considers to be very reasonable."

Welsh had made earlier efforts to still the controversy by offering land to the church which would permit construction of the annex in conformity with building regulations.

Lieut. Col. Check Receives DSC for Heroism in Korea

Lieut. Col. Gilbert J. Check of Washington has been awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for "extraordinary heroism" in Korea, it was learned yesterday.

A citation by Lieut. Gen. Walton Walker says that "Colonel Check so inspired his unit that they disrupted enemy communications, destroyed road blocks and inflicted many casualties."

Colonel Check is a former employe of the Department of Agriculture. His sister, Mrs. Robert Nolan, lives at 7 Thayer pl., Silver Spring, Md.

The woman, Mrs. Jonnie Mae Cooper, 25, of 425 L st. nw., was pronounced dead on arrival at Freedmen's Hospital. Held as her killer was her husband, Jack, 25.

The shooting occurred at 9:20 p. m. in front of the Ferguson Restaurant, 436 L st. nw. Police said Cooper remained at the scene after the shooting and surrendered when police arrived.

"He admitted that he shot her but wouldn't say why," said Lieut. Robert R. Gould of the Second Precinct.

According to Gould, the couple and Mrs. Cooper's mother were in the restaurant shortly before the shooting. The husband left, went home and got the shotgun and then waited across the street from the restaurant until his wife came out. The victim's mother fled after the shooting.

Two Drivers Cleared in Traffic Deaths

Both Fatalities Ruled Accidental By Coroner's Jury

Two drivers were exonerated yesterday at inquests into the recent District traffic deaths of two children.

One of the victims was Bessie Minor, 5, of 1722 Seaton st. nw., who was fatally injured September 5 when struck by a car a half-block from her home.

The driver, Dr. Lawrence Green, 45, of 1237 Irving st. nw., gave the child first aid and then rushed her to Children's Hospital but she died within an hour. The coroner's jury ruled the death accidental.

The second inquest was into the death on Tuesday of Juanita Shaw, 3, of 2605 Barry rd. se., whose neck was crushed under a truck near her home. The truck was operated by Drayton E. Shell, 28, a roomer in the Shaw home.

The child's mother was a passenger in the truck when Shaw started off, not knowing the child was beside the truck. Again the verdict was accidental death.

Gaithersburg Woman Hurt in Auto Collision

Mrs. Carol Ballenger, 25, of Route 3, Gaithersburg, Md., suffered severe face lacerations yesterday in a two-car collision on Route 121, 2 miles west of Gaithersburg.

Police said she was riding in a car driven by her husband, Gilbert E. Ballenger, 27, when it was struck by another auto, which came out of a side road. She was taken by the Gaithersburg Rescue Squad to Suburban Hospital, where she was admitted.

The Ballengers' 4-year-old daughter, Ruth, was treated by a doctor for a cut lip. The driver of the second car, Harry A. Palmer, 18, of Germantown, Md., was charged with reckless driving and released on personal bond to appear in Police Court at Rockville October 12, police said.

Arlington Rally Backs Sewage Bonds

More than a hundred Arlington Democrats at a rally in the Lyon Park Community House last night adopted a resolution favoring a $2,617,000 bond issue for improvement of sewage treatment facilities.

Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.), chief speaker at the rally, was cheered enthusiastically when he finished a brief review of his 20-year record as representative from the Eighth District.

In his talk, Smith cited his authorship of the Alien Registration Act under which 11 Communists were recently convicted in New York State.

Locally, Smith said he has supported the construction of Potomac River bridges which have aided in the development and growth of Arlington County, and supported passage several weeks ago of a bill which will provide Federal money for school aid in Arlington.

County Board Candidate Fred W. Bach also addressed the group, charging his opponent, County Board Chairman Daniel A. Dugan, with being a "double-talker."

Bach asserted that the issue in the county board race this year is "moderation versus high taxes." He accused his opponent of being the "high tax candidate."

Navy Bureau Dance

Men's Store Mannequins Are Stripped

Window Smashed, Goods Worth $1000 Taken; Arlington Store Is Looted

Now that burlesque has departed the Gayety Theater it's too bad someone wasn't around to witness that neat strip act early yesterday near 14th and H sts. nw.

Some clothing dummies got stripped after someone heaved a block of concrete through the plate glass show window of Goldheim's men's furnishings store, 1409 H st. nw. Merchandise valued at $1000 was taken.

The underworld apparently was out to do its fall shopping early. In Arlington, thieves broke into the Hub Men's Store, 1130 N. Highland st., and walked off with $11,000 worth of men's furnishings.

The strip job at Goldheim's saddened owner I. L. Goldheim. e would like to know where the police were. He estimates it must have taken the thief at least 30 minutes to disrobe the window dummies.

The store owner said this is the fourth time in 3 years his store has been robbed, and police have never made an arrest nor recovered any of the stolen property.

Goldheim said a private watchman who patrols the neighborhood checked the store at 2:30 a. m. and everything was fine. Police discovered the shattered window at 6:30 a. m.

The Arlington job, county police said, was accomplished after thieves forced a rear door of the Hub store. Maurice Bellin, of 736 Quackenbos st. nw., manager of the store reported loss of 200 suits and other men's wear.

Arlington police said the loot apparently was carted away in a truck or automobile that had been parked in an alley behind the store.

Citizens Hit Water Pipe Repair Costs

The Northeast Council of Citizens Associations last night asked the District Commissioners to relieve property owners from all costs incidental to the maintenance and repair of water pipes beyond the property line.

Meeting at the Twelfth Precinct Station, the group also requested a traffic survey to determine the need for traffic lights at 7th and Franklin sts. ne.

Connecticut Avenue

Mrs. Joseph L. Miller of 3301 Highland pl. nw., was elceted of the Connecticut Avenue Citizens Association at a meeting last night in the Parish House of All Souls' Church, Cathedral ave. and Woodley pl. nw.

Also elected were Irving Wilner, first vice president; Mrs. Smith Brokhart, second vice president; David Rankin Barbee, third vice president; Mrs. Frances McEvoy, secretary; Mrs. John Drier, assistant secretary, and Miss Elizabeth Groves, treasurer.

David Babp and A. C. Shire were named delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations. The group voted to make a donation to the court fight against a gas rate increase.

Arkansas Avenue

Frank Gauss was nominated for president at a meeting of the Arkansas Avenue Community Association last night in Burdick Vocational School, 13th and Allison sts. nw. The association will elect at its November 2 meeting.

The District's rehabilitation center for tubercular patients, between 13th and 14th, Upshur and Allison sts., was discussed at the meeting, and a proposal was approved that a committee be named to see if the tract can be put to use by the board of education.

Dances Planned To Boost Interest In Recruiting

The first of a series of dances planned to stimulate interest in the District National Guard and its recruiting program will be held from 9 to 1 Friday night at the District Armory.

Guardsmen will be hosts to invited guests and music will be furnished by the orchestra of the Guard's 257th Army Band, under direction of Warrant Officer Alfonso Esposito.

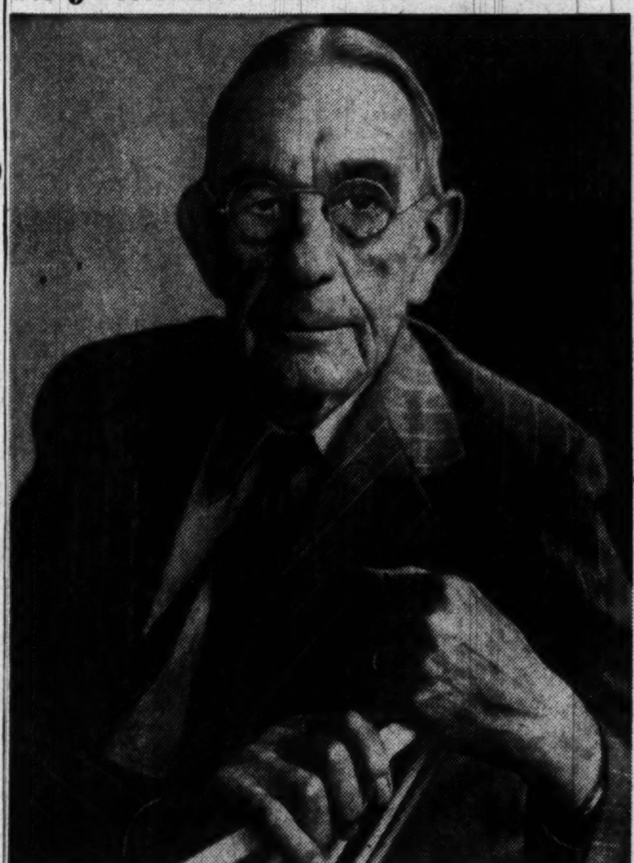
Other branches of the service yesterday enlisted a few local men and the Army inducted 93 District selectees. Enlistments included three in the Marines and one in the Air Force.

Children's Hospital Gets $300 Gift From Masons

Receipt by Children's Hospital of $300 from Social Lodge No. 1, F. & A. M., to buy a muscle-testing machine and a quantity of the drug cortisone, was announced yesterday.

The gift was presented by George Morris, chairman of the Masonic order's charities committee. It was received by Miss Elizabeth Dixon, clinical instructor, and Miss Nancy Pratt, physical therapist, whose departments are benefitted.

Growth of a City Reflected In John Thomas' Life Span



By Arthur Ellis-The Washington Post

John W. Thomas, 80, retires after 62 years in the hardware business

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

To measure the distance from Hell's Bottom to Swampoodle, or to gauge the span between apprenticeship and mastery of a trade, one may study the boulder-like fists of John W. Thomas.

Carved in the creases of his leathery hands, which he now contemplates warmly in octogenarian retirement, is a veritable picture-map of Washington in yesteryear.

The part of town Thomas knows best is in the 700 block of 7th st. nw., for he was born at 718 and worked for 62 years directly across the street at 717.

A Shot for a Nickel

He started out at 15 as a delivery boy in 1884—in the days when you could "get a shot of whisky for a nickel"—at the hardware firm of W. S. Jenks and Son, now at 723 7th st. nw.

Within a year Thomas had learned his trade as a sheet metal worker, and when he retired recently he was in charge of the plant's shopwork and manufacturing.

That part of town, with its rows of shops and second-floor residences, was familiar to natives as "Northern Liberty" ward. Thomas went to school at 6th and New York ave., which was first the Northern Liberty Fire Engine Co. house, later the Abbott School, now No. 2 Precinct Station.

He "bummed around a while" with his brother Theodore after finishing the eighth grade and before going to work. It was then he began ot regard his fists as a means of survival and livelihood.

Fights, Always Fights

"You couldn't cross over from one neighborhood to another without getting into a fight with another gang of kids," Thomas reminisced, somewhat pleasurably, at his present home at 4406 Volta pl. nw.

Thomas' ramrod leanness—he's still a sturdy 6-foot-2—and his physical vigor are hints he never absorbed a "long count."

The Thomas family moved to 625 K st. nw. when "Jack" was a boy, and he roamed that neighborhood every night until he was married at 25.

"We used to think a man oughta be arrested if he got more than two or three hours' sleep," he said of his associates in the printing and hardware trade. Marriage at 25 brought an end to that, however.

Refreshing Evenings

There was jolly good fellowship after a hard day's work in such refreshment emporiums of the day as Charley Dismer's place, on the south side of K st. opposite Mount Vernon sq.; or Leopold Weiss', on 7th between I and K; or St. Joseph's Hall, at 5th and H nw.

Earlier in the day, a familiar scene would be a man pushing a cart from Bates Soap Factory through the streets, crying: "Soap fat, ham fat and mutton lard."

Housewives would exchange any of these commodities for a chunk of soap, cut off a big slab.

"It was just a good old provincial neighborhood," Thomas recalled. "I couldn't wear a hat on 7th st., I'd be so busy taking it off and speaking to people."

Good Cleveland Democrat

He remembers well when they laid wooden blocks as "pavement" on 7th st., along about 1876.

He remembers Grover Cleveland—"I always was a good Cleveland Democrat"—riding through the neighborhood, the carriage sagging under the President's weight.

He remembers passing the White House on the way home from the Concordia Lutheran Church Sunday School at 1920 G st. nw., gathering horse chestnuts from the lawn and being called on the porch by Rutherford B. Hayes to discuss what had transpired during the morning's religious instruction.

He remembers the many fights when he crossed over into Swampoodle—around I st. and N. Capitol—and especially a fellow named Hurdle.

Never A Lump

"Hurdle didn't hit you with his fist. He butted your head with his head. And he never showed a lump."

He remembers almost "a murder every day" in Hell's Bottom, along 11th st. above Q.

Those were what he calls his "wild Indian" days, when two fists were none too many to make your way in a rugged, lusty neighborhood, full of "the best bunch of Germans, Dutchmen, and Irishmen you ever saw."

Electrical Engineer Retires After 46 Years With City

Kern first got a job with the city as an electrical inspector in 1904, moved up to become assistant electrical engineer in 1917 and has held his present position since 1931. He will reach the compulsory retirement age of 70 on Sunday.

His job has been to look after most of the city government's communication system, pass on utility company applications for overhead wires and put up street lighting posts and fixtures.

In recent years—presumably because they are attached to light posts—Kern has also been in charge of putting out flags for special occasions. He keeps a supply of American flags on hand and borrows those of other countries from the State Department when foreign dignitaries come to town.

The percentage of loss in flags has been low, but Kern recalls in horror a recent situation when a manufacturer sent 10,000 Chile flags all dyed the wrong color.

Conciliator's Parley Fails In Strike on WM&A Line

Walkout Goes Into Third Day Despite Efforts Of U. S. Mediator

The W. M. & A. bus strike will continue into a third day today, despite efforts of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service to find a solution of the dispute.

AFL drivers and mechanics of the line, which normally carries 20,000 passengers between the District and Prince Georges County communities and government facilities, struck early Wednesday in protest against the discharge of a driver.

Negligence Charged

Management charges the driver was negligent in a bus accident, and that the dismissal was made in the interests of public safety. The union, Division 1365, of the Motor Coach Employes of America, holds that the road conditions, and not the driver, were to blame for the accidents. Both sides want to arbitrate the issue, but can't seem to agree on what to arbitrate.

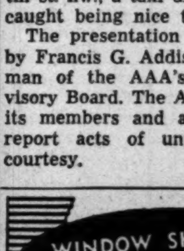
Charles T. Estes, a special assistant to Conciliation Chief Cyrus S. Ching, yesterday brought attorneys for the company and union together in a move to find an approach to peace, but last night both sides were holding to their respective positions.

The company has been operating 11 out of its normal complement of 45 buses during rush hours with supervisory personnel as drivers.

Center of Dispute

Norman F. Gibbs, center of the controversy, said yesterday, "The union is not only fighting for me, but for all drivers."

Gibbs, whose discharge led to the strike, attended an all-day meeting of the union in the Boulevard Heights, Md., fire house. Gibbs, who is 25 and lives with his wife and four small children at 412 65th st., Maryland Park, said yesterday that the strike wasn't so much over whether he should be fired, but whether it should be done without arbitration.



Gibbs

"It could happen to any driver," he said.

Gibbs has lived in the Washington area all his life except for a hitch in the Navy during World War II. Before becoming a bus driver he worked in the Naval Gun Factory.

LIKE RABBIT, IT GETS AWAY—The ball gets away from Hank Bauer, New York right fielder, as he takes a tumble in short right center attempting to make a shoestring catch of a hit by the Phillies' Richie Ashburn in the first inning of yesterday's World Series game. But Ashburn didn't score and the Yankees went on to win in 10 innings, 2-1

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

SHIBE PARK, Philadelphia, Oct. 5.—Two thousand more persons showed up for the second game of the World Series, and the suspicion is that the scalpers have been driven to using the tickets they couldn't unload yesterday and among the ticket specs, that is the last word in mortification.

VIC RASCHI was an unhappy guy on the Yankees' bench today despite his 1-0 triumph in the Series opener. Even if the Yankees win the Series, Raschi will net only what amounts to a loser's share. Thieves who broke into his hotel room while he was pitching his shutout, filched $2000 worth of jewelry, cash and Series tickets.

Povich

Philadelphia's police are still without a clue to the miscreants, but a precinct captain today stated flatly: We do not believe the thief to be a Yankee fan.

COMMISSIONER CHANDLER today dispensed with the impressive ritual of yesterday when he asked the fans to stand in 30 silent seconds of prayer for world peace. While the fans were praying for peace, the bareheaded ball players were doubtless praying for a piece of the $800,000 television money Chandler got.

NO MATTER WHAT HAPPENS, this World Series has already set one record. It is the most-ghosted Series of all time, with such authors as Jim Konstanty, Del Ennis, Andy Seminick, Curt Simmons and Eddie Sawyer by-lining articles for the press. Which recalls that one World Series athlete a few years back admonished his ghost to "stop using those big words so I can understand what I am writing."

The Phillies' fans raised their first cheer of the day when Richie Asburn cracked a long drive toward left field in the first inning. They cheered it even as it curved foul, prompting Mr. Gerry Hearn of the Boston Post to comment, "If it's long foul hitters they like here, the Red Sox will be happy to sell them Vern Stephens."

Beacon-like in a rich brown creation that announced his presence at the Series in shrieking overtones was Commissioner A. B. Chandler in a seat abaft the Phillies' dugout. His get-up defeated the press box style authorities, but I chance the guess he was wearing Basin Street tweeds.

THE YANKEES were confusing the dickens out of the Phillies. The Whiz Kids, taught to respect such as Joe DiMaggio and Johnny Mize, got that pair out on easy pop-ups in the first inning, and then were conked for a run in the second by hits off the bats of Allie Reynolds and Gene Woodling.

In the early innings, the Yankees came up with a special third-out defense against the Phils, Coleman to Mize. Reynolds was in trouble in each of the first three innings but in each case one of the Whiz Kids grounded to Coleman for the final out.

When the Phillies did tie it up at 1-1 in the fifth inning, the Yankees could console themselves with the thought that they were the victims of the biggest bad hop in World Series history. Waitkus' key hit, an innocent-looking grounder that bounded 20 feet over the head of Coleman, made Earl McNeely's famous pebble hit of the 1924 World Series look bush league in the bad hop department.

FUNNY COINCIDENCE was that the Phillies sent for the ground crew to rake up and smooth out the baselines when that fifth inning ended. They wanted no bad hops when the Yankees were at bat.

Joe DiMaggio brought himself to a remarkable stop just before crashing into the center field fence in the sixth, after his long run that snared Del Ennis' long swat. And then he actually placed a kiss on the fence in his appreciation of the fact it didn't hit him, or vice versa.

ALLIE REYNOLDS, the Yankees' pitcher from Oklahoma who has a strong strain of Cherokee in his veins, made a fancy catch of Robin Roberts' pop bunt in the fifth, getting to the ball with his finger tips as it threatened to drop safely. Part Indian and part infielder, he could be called.

REYNOLDS had his nerve with him in the eighth when with none out and the score tied, he chose to try a force play at second on Sisler's bunt. In his haste he made a wild throw, but not too wild for Phil Rizzuto who saved Reynolds a ghastly error by gloving the ball and somehow keeping his little feet on the bag.

Joe DiMaggio said after the game that his tenth-inning game-winning homer was the most important home run he ever hit in his life, and that's believable. After popping up four times in a row, and twice yesterday, it was getting down right important that he do something along the home-run line.

The Yankees were merely being compensated by DiMaggio in that tenth. They had carried him for nine rounds.

Today in New York

Lopat Faces Heintzelman Or Bob Miller

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 5—Manager Casey Stengel of the New York Yankees named Southpaw Ed Lopat to start tomorrow in the third game of the World Series at Yankee Stadium.

Eddie Sawyer, the Phillies' skipper, still is undecided about his pitching selection. "It will be Ken Heintzelman or Bob Miller. I'll decide tomorrow morning."

The consensus is that Sawyer will go to the veteran lefthander, Heintzelman, whose slow assortment of stuff might keep the fastball hitting Yankes off stride.

Lopat won 18 games and lost eight this season while Heintzelman compiled a mediocre three and nine for Philadelphia. Miller won 11 and lost six.

Slump Puzzles Sawyer

Stripped down to a sleeveless red sweat shirt, Sawyer sat in his tiny clubhouse office and tried to figure out what's wrong with his National League champions at the bat. They have scored but 10 runs in their last 56 innings of baseball, including one each in the pair of series games lost to the New York Yankees.

"We got our only run today thanks to a bad bounce over Gerry Coleman's head at second base. It looks like we need four bases on balls to score.

"Well, there is one solace, we can't be any worse in the Yankee Stadium. Maybe our kids will snap out of it. One thing I'm sure of, they won't let any stadium scare them. We'll play our usual game and score some runs, I hope."

Talking about Robin Roberts' pitching performance, Sawyer said he thought the former Michigan State collegian did a swell job. "No, I never planned on taking him out unless we had the winning runs set up and I had to go for a pinch hitter."

Asked what he told Roberts when he walked out to the mound in the eighth with runners on second and third and two out, Sawyer replied:

"I told him to watch for a squeeze play. Even with Allie Reynolds at bat, I thought the Yanks might try to squeeze the run home. Johnny Hopp, a fast man, was on third. It didn't make any difference since Robbie struck out Reynolds for the third out."

Sawyer was asked why he let second baseman Mike Goliat hit a 3-1 pitch with the potential winning run at second in the ninth inning. Some experts thought Goliat should have taken a pitch in an attempt to walk.

"You don't know my bench," said Sawyer, "or you wouldn't ask that question. Roberts was next at bat and to be perfectly honest we didn't have a good pinch hitter left on the bench. I let Mike use his own judgment on the pitch and I would do it again tomorrow under the same circumstances."

By Whitney Martin

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 5 (AP).—Fate, so kind to Dick Sisler last Sunday, rapped him stoutly across the knuckles today for the second straight day, and the Philadelphia Phils again trooped dejectedly from the field, this time losers to the New York Yankees, 2 to 1.

It was the big, good-natured Phillie left fielder who put the Phils in the World Series with his dramatic home run in the game with the Dodgers Sunday.

Yesterday, with the team one run behind and two out in the ninth, he came to bat. He struck out.

Today, with his team one run behind in the tenth inning, two out and a man on second, he came up again. He took two tremendous swings and a timorous half swing, and it was all over.

The Yankees rushed out to pound Allie Reynolds on the back as Dick, after a brief, futile beef at the third strike call, dropped his chin to his chest and stumbled forlornly to the bench, his Sunday glory suddenly faded memory.

Sisler came out of the shower still fuming about the half swing he took to end the game.

"I'm not alibing fellows, believe me, but that last pitch was high and inside and while I motioned to hit it, I didn't break my wrist. But Umpire Bill McGowan said I swung. He has the last word but I think he missed that one.

"But I guess I'm not much of a guy to be talking about umpires in the Series. I've been rotten. I don't know what it is unless I'm too anxious. I guess I'm trying to kill the ball."

ON THE GROUND AGAIN—Richie Ashburn sprawls in center field as a drive by the Yankees' Gerry Coleman gets past the Phillies' outfielder for a double in the fourth inning of yesterday's World Series game. The ball took a bad bounce and Richie was barely able to knock it down ening to get them home in front and they had been on bases in nine of the 10 innings against Reynoldsolds. It was high action after yesterday's dull first game. The Yankees, too, had men on base in all save two innings.

Back in the second inning, Reynolds himself had figuresd in the run that gave the Yankees a 1-0 lead with a single to right after Gerry Coleman drew a walk with none out. Gene Woodling fetched Coleman home from third with a single that Shortstop Gran Hamner could barely knock down.

The game rocked along at those figures until the fifth when the Phils were the happy recipients of a powerful break. Mike Goliat led off with an infield hit that Coleman knocked down out of position for a throw. Reynolds temporarily staved off more trouble by making a superb grab of Robert's pop bunt for the first out.

It Takes a High Hop

And then the Phils got lucky. Waitkus hit a ground ball at Coleman who was poised for a routine play, perhaps a double play, when to the horror of the Yanks it bounded unconscionably high over the second baseman's head and into right field for a single that got Waitkus to third with one out. Richie Ashburn got Waitkus home with a deep fly to Woodling in left.

The Yankees rapped Roberts for 10 hits, to 7 Reynolds was permitting the Phils in the duel of righthanded fastballers.

To get his victory, Reynolds had to pitch himself out of a series of messes in the eighth and ninth, when the Phils got the potenial winning run on with one out, and in the tenth when he walked Pinch-hitter Jack Mayo with none out.

In that tenth, Manager Eddie Sawyer of the Phils played it cozy, with Waitkus sacrificing Mayo to second. And then Reynolds bent to his task. He got rid of Ashburn on a pop foul to Firstbaseman Johnny Hopp, and now was confronted with Dick Sisler. That didn't take long. The big Yankees righthander got the first two pitches over with Sisler swinging and put him in a hole with a 2-0 count. Then he dispatched him on the next pitch. It was a half swing by Sisler, but Umpire Bill McGowan's right arm went up in the "strike three" sign and the Yanks had the ball game. Sisler wanted to argue, but McGowan had other business to attend.

The Yankees threw up a superb defense behind Reynolds in the last three innings, after abandoning him with that mere one run off Roberts who, like Jim Konstanty the day before, was having little trouble with the fat end of the Yankees' batting order.

Until DiMag came through with his climactic homer, the Berra-Mize-DiMaggio trio had gone out seven times on pop ups, had achieved only two singles in 12 times at bat.

After consecutive singles by Bobby Brown and Hank Bauer with one out got the Yankees nothing against Roberts in the eighth, Reynolds had to bear down to keep the Phillies from scoring. In the seventh he had escaped after issuing a walk to Andy Seminick, with none out.

In the eighth, Richie Ashburn dumped a perfectly bunted single down the third base line and beat it out, and then the Yankees' defense began to pay off.

Reynolds, hazarding a chance that his throw to second might be tardy on Sisler's bunt that followed, made it anyway and was rewarded when Rizzuto made a leaping catch of an errant throw, for a force play.

Then the Yankees' double-play combination swung into action for the first time in the Series. Casey Stengel had just replaced Brown at third base with better-fielding Bill Johnson and it paid off immediately. Johnson grabbed Ennis' hot grounder and routed it to Coleman who relayed it to Hopp for a twin out.

The Phillies, still on the muscle in the ninth after Roberts put the Yanks down in one-two-three order, got a lift from Gran Hamner who doubled to center with one out. Dick Whitman moved in to pinch-hit for Ken Silvestri, and Stengel ordered him passed to set up a double play situation. And on Goliat's grounder to Ruzzuto, the Yanks got their double-play despite Whitman's effort to crash Coleman at second base.

Both teams were muffing scoring chances early in the game—the Yanks in the first inning after Woodling opened with a single to short and moved to third on Berra's looping single to left with one out. Both Di Maggio and Mize popped up, as Roberts took complete charge.

The Phillies fluffed it against Reynolds in the first inning, too, after Ashburn's clout into short right center went for a double as Bauer missed a shoestring catch. But with only one out, Sisler fanned, and Coleman got Reynolds home free with a smart play on Ennis' grounder.

Extra Base Hits Wasted

The Whiz Kids' first three hits off Reynolds were for extra bases, but they cashed in on none. Hamner tripled to right center with one out in the second, and was stranded. Waitkus doubled into the right field corner with one out in the third, and neither Ashburn nor Sisler could get him home.

At the end of two games, the Phils have one run to show for their swinging against Yankee pitching—and that on a bad hop. It isn't a happy picture for them as the Series scene shifts to Yankee Stadium tomorrow.

'Anything Can Happen Yet,' Says Yank Pilot

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 5—If you think the Yankees can defeat the Phillies in four straight games, cautious Casey Stengel will thank you not to mention it in front of him.

"Anything can happen yet," Stengel quickly pointed out after the Yankees' second World Series triumph over Philadelphia today.

"I'm not even letting myself think about winning in four straight games," he added with a frightened look at his questioners.

"Those guys have a great ball club. I mean it sincerely. Look at the pitching they're getting. My boys haven't been hammering them all over the lot.

"Sure, I know we're going back to New York now and all that, but please let's not talk about four straight when there's still plenty of innings left to play."

Bobby Brown, a .264 hitter during the regular season, continued to shine in World Series play. The young Yankee doctor slapped two singles in four times at bat to give him a series mark of 12 hits in 23 times at bat. He has been in three World Series.

The last previous extra inning game was played five years ago. Like this one, it was a 10-inning affair on October 6, 1946, when the Boston Red Sox nosed out the St. Louis Cards, 3-2.

The great Joe DiMaggio had an anxious moment or two before he collared Eddie Waitkus' long line drive for the final out in the bottom half of the seventh inning.

DiMaggio was adjusting his sun glasses with Waitkus up and wasn't paying too much attention to the goings-on at home plate. The crack of the bat seemed to startle him and he looked up just in time to see the ball winging out his way.

After faltering a split second, he got his bearings, drew a bead on the ball and successfully hauled it in.

Gran Hamner, trying to pull the Phils together, said the Yankee Stadium wouldn't awe the National Leaguers.

"We're over our jitters now;" Hamner said. "We'll come back—If we can get some runs."

The Phillies ran their World Series losing streak to six straight one-run defeats. Of course, the streak covers more than a generation, 35 years.

'Old Gent' Can Still Swing That Cane

By Red Smith

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 5 (NYHT).—After 35 years, 3 hours and 56 minutes, the Phillies scored a run off American League pitching today, and such excitement swept this town you'd have thought the British were coming again. They weren't. Di Maggio was.

If the second game of the World Series proved anything to the 32,660 witnesses yelping and bawling in Shibe Park this afternoon, it demonstrated that baseball is a young man's game. For nine innings the elderly gentlemen who work for the Yankees hit pusillanimous pop-ups against the wonderful pitching of the Phillies young Robin Roberts.

Red Smith

On fourteen separate occasions, the field agents of Casey Stengel tottered up to the plate and gave what Uncle Wilbert Robinson once describes as brilliant imitations of men hitting out of a well. It was a bad day for low-flying ducks.

Again and again, feeble little bloopers spiraled skyward and descended into the gloves of Philadelphia infielders. On five occasions, the New York batter missed the ball altogether, striking out.

Doddering Joe Di Maggio, who'll hobble into his thirty-seventh year next month, was the feeblest of them all. On his first time at bat, he popped to the second baseman, on his next, he popped to the second baseman. On his third, he popped to the third baseman and a small cheer went up among a knot of his friends.

"He's pulling the ball now," they exulted. But on his fourth trip, old Joe popped to the first baseman.

WHEN HE came up again in the tenth inning with the score tied at one-all, Roberts threw him one pitch. Joe said later that it was a slider and Roberts said it was a fast ball. There'll be bad blood between them until the issue is settled, so let's not be drawn into the quarrel. Whatever it was coming, it was a fast ball going.

It streaked over second base on a rising line. Richie Ashburn, playing center field for the Phillies, turned and started toward the double-decked bleachers. He ran a few yards, stopped and watched. He saw a customer several rows back in the upper stands rise, catch the ball, and sit down.

It was an old gentleman's hit. An Old Professional Gentleman's. The Old Professional Gentleman went creaking around the bases, and the Yankees got ready to catch a train for New York, where they will endeavor to beat the Phillies for the third and fourth time tomorrow and Saturday.

'God Bless Joe'

Allie Hears About Homer Over Radio

(Editor's Note: Allie Reynolds pitched the New York Yankees to a 10-inning 2 to 1 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies today, thereby giving his club a two-game lead in the World Series. Reynolds tells how he won in the following dispatch.)

By Allie Reynolds
(As Told to the United Press)

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 5.—I heard it on the radio. Honest. I heard about DiMag's homer on the radio.

God bless Joe DiMaggio! If he hadn't hit it, I'd probably still be pitching yet.

But I never saw Joe hit it. I had gone into our clubhouse for a few minutes while we were hitting and I heard the radio announcer say DiMaggio hit the ball into the left field stands.

I never felt so good about anything in my life although I still wanted to go out and see that one run on the scoreboard.

As for my pitching, I had the same trouble out on the mound that Vic Raschi had yesterday. It was so cold that I couldn't get my curve working too well. So I relied mostly on fast balls.

JUST TO KEEP the Phillies off balance once in a while I mixed in a few sliders. Let me tell you I have plenty of respect for that Philadelphia club, especially Granny Hamner.

Hamner got to me for a triple, a double and a walk. They tipped me he was a good high ball hitter and now I'm really ready to believe it. He hit two high balls pretty good off me. I just couldn't keep the ball down when I was pitching to him.

Already some folks are asking me whether I received a bigger thrill out of beating the Phillies today or beating Brooklyn, 1-0, in the opening game of the 1949 World Series.

Well, to tell the truth I really don't know which game meant more although I will say this one was harder to win. You see, my case was something like the case of Philadelphias' pitcher Robin Roberts.

I worked quite a bit near the end of this season and I didn't feel as strong today as I did the day I beat the Dodgers.

I'm certainly glad we're going back to New York because I'm going straight to my hotel room to rest. I'm not much of a celebrator so tonight I may mark our victory with a glass of beer.

Besides, the victory was just as much Joe's and the rest of the fellows as it was mine.

Davis, Allen Hook Up in Aerial Duel

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

West Virginia and George Washington hold their first football reunion in 10 years tonight, 8:30, at Griffith Stadium.

The Colonials are slight favorites to pick up their series the same way they left off in 1940—with a victory.

About 7500 fans are expected as the Mountaineers bid for their first Southern Conference triumph since they were admitted to the league last December.

A week ago, in Lynchburg, Va., they were beaten in their first conference game, 26-7, by Washington and Lee. Before then, they won a nonleague contest from Western Reserve, 38-13.

Colonials Seek 2d Straight

G. W. is shooting for its second straight conference win. Last Friday night, the Colonials upset Virginia Military Institute, 15-12, and before then they lost to Virginia, 19-0.

Although the teams use different systems—G. W. the single wing, and West Virginia the modified T—both will rely on passing.

For the Colonials, Andy Davis and Bob Cilento will do the pitching, against Quarterback Billy Allen of the Mountaineers.

The favorite target for Davis and Cilento is Charlie Jones, who has been shifted from wingback to end since the season started. He has already grabbed six passes for 147 yards. Jones went 62 yards with a Davis pass in the V. M. I. game.

Both teams will be missing a couple of key players because of leg injuries. Bino Barreira, 155-pound running halfback, and Walt Savage, first string defensive halfback, are out for G. W. Walter Glenn and Johnny Murphy, the Mountaineers' regular halfbacks, are also sidelined.

Redskins May Learn

Giants' Defense Outscores Offense

ONE OF these days—and it's highly likely that Sunday is the day—the offensive backfield men on the New York Giants football team are going to start scoring touchdowns and when that happens the unbeaten New Yorkers are going to be even more unbeatable.

Coming into their clash with the Redskins Sunday at Griffith Stadium, the Giants have scored only three touchdowns to win their first two games, but the strange part about their scoring is that only one offensive back has scored.

The other six-pointers hung up by a tackle—Duke's Al DeRogatis, and a defensive halfback, Tom Landry.

"How in the world are you expected to set up a defense for a team whose defensive players have done most of the scoring so far?" Redskins Coach Herman Ball sighed last night as he tried to devise some way for his Redskins to snap their two-game losing streak.

Rookie DeRogatis recovered a fumble in the end zone for one touchdown against the Steelers and a little later on in the same game Ray Poole, a defensive end, recovered another fumble and lateralled to Landry, defensive right halfback who trucked across for the other Giants' touchdown.

In proving the Cleveland Browns were invincible, the Giants permitted Eddie Price, rookie fullback from Tulane, to cap a 55-yard drive by diving over from three yards for the only score of the game.

The embattled Redskins, who are now more glaringly on the spot than at any time in recent years, got a little good news yesterday when it was learned that Price and Guard Johnny Mastrangelo and Center Johnny Rapacz may miss the game.

Mastrangelo and Rapacz, who along with Price were the chief engineers of the 6-0 decision over the Browns, are still suffering from wounds in that bruising defensive clash.

The Redskins haven't beaten the Giants in two years. They are 10-point underdogs to perpetuate their losing streak.

Nose 'Unabridged'

Hoya Sheridan Is in Stitches

Georgetown's vicious scrimmage session yesterday put Tackle Art Sheridan in stitches—16 of them to be exact.

One of Sheridan's teammates accidentally butted Sheridan, and his nose guard snapped down across the bridge of his nose. He was rushed to Georgetown Hospital, and 16 stitches were required to close the wound. However, both his eyes are swollen shut, and the 240-pounder will, understandably, not be fit for Saturday's Tulsa game at Griffith Stadium.

West Virginia Alumni Hold Open House

The West Virginia University Alumni Association will hold open house from 5 to 7:30 p. m. today at the Roosevelt Hotel's Victory Room. West Virginia alumni and friends are invited and tickets for the G. W. game tonight can be purchased there.

Navy Plagued By Injuries

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 5 (AP).—Navy's football date with Northwestern is still two days off, but Coach Eddie Erdelatz says glumly the Midshipmen already have been tossed for a huge loss.

Injuries did it.

"They've thrown us way back," Erdelatz said today.

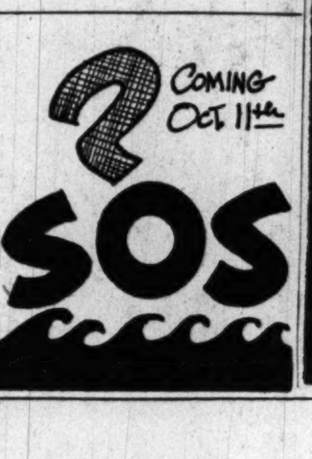
Vine was hurt in scrimmage. Chances are he will have to watch from the sidelines as Navy sails against Northwestern in Baltimore.

Vine was No. 2 left halfback, just behind Frankie Hauff. Now Erdelatz must turn to Ira Kane or Don Fisher. They're fast and willing youths, but green as the grass in Memorial Stadium.

The wost blow had been struck when last Saturday's Maryland game disabled Ends Tom Bakke and Bob McDonald. It was aggravated today with a hospital warning that Bakke may be idle as long as six weeks. He was badly bruised in the back and can barely hobble around.



'Old Gent' Can Still Swing

As a matter of fact, Joe may have saved the game in his elderly, professional style a few minutes before hitting the home run that won it. With one out in the ninth inning, Granny Hamner—whose name suggests a sweet old lady smelling of lavender but who used to rack balls in a pool hall in Richmond, Va.—racked up a ball served by Allie Reynolds.

It was a long line drive that whistled out on a flat trajectory between center and right fields, and if it had got through the New York defense it would surely have been a triple and possibly the home run that would end the game. DiMaggio, starting when the ball did, loped over to his left, fielded the hit like a shortstop, and stopped Hamner at second base.

What followed did not suggest that the Phillies could have scored Hamner, even from third base. But nobody ever can tell about that. The way it went, Professor Eddie Sawyer, the licensed scorcerer of the Phillies, chose Dick Whitman to bat for Ken Silvestri and Casey Stengel, the Yankee resident djinn, advised Reynolds to put him on first base. Mike Goliat then grounded into a double play, retiring the side.

By contrast with the Phillies' demonstration of how not to hit Vic Raschi in the first game, this was lively entertainment. Philadelphia kept rapping Reynolds for extra bases and managed to tie the score in the fifth inning. Roberts and Reynolds, both pitching elegantly, managed to keep it tied until DiMaggio loosened the stays.

With both teams frequently threatening, excitement grew. At one point, Happy Chandler, baseball's little king, came right up out of his box seat and visited the Phillies' dugout, presumably to ask the score. His action was generally approved, on the principle that a fellow ought to know the score at least once in five years.

Afterwards it was said that the fans who waited since 1915 for their Phils to get into a World Series no longer seemed to care if they had to wait 35 years to see it happen again. This was unfair. They were still whooping for their heroes in the home half of the tenth when a walk and sacrifice put the tying run on second base with one out.

Reynolds threw something small, blurred and white to Richie Ashburn, who popped up. He threw more of the same to Dick Sisler, who started to swing at a third strike, checked himself halfway around and learned from Bill McGowan, the umpire, that the game was over.

McGowan walked toward the dugout. Yogi Berra and the Yankee infielders ran toward the mound to salute Reynolds. Sisler stomped behind McGowan, saying things. Nobody listened. He hurled his bat away and a customer leaped aside, dodging.

Mr. Stengel smiled and spoke behind his hand in the manner of a conspirator. "I am," he confided hoarsely, "getting good work from my help."

—And Maryland Winning—

Grimsley Sees Letdown Beating Michigan State

By Will Grimsley

NEW YORK, Oct. 5 (AP).—This is "letdown" week for last Saturday's giant killers, so gird for upsets among the upsetters.

MARYLAND over Michigan State—The Spartans, the Nation's No. 2 eleven, suffer a mental and physical letdown after their victory over Michigan. Maryland is coming strong.

GEORGIA over North Carolina—The Bulldogs' Wally Butts has pointed for this one while Notre Dame took too much out of the Tar Heels in last Saturday's 14-7 squeak.

SOUTHERN Methodist over Missouri—Here's a good chance for Missouri's Don Faurot to fashion the day's major upheaval but we figure SMU still has too many guns.

NOTRE Dame over Purdue—The Fighting Irish don't have one of their great teams but this is not the week for snapping that 39-game unbeaten streak.

TENNESSEE over Duke—Gen. Bob Neyland was looking over Mississippi State's head to this one when the Vols stumbled last week. A teeth-jarring game between two perennial Dixie giants.

ARMY over Penn. State—Gil Stephenson, Jim Cain and Vic Pollock get some more exercise scoring touchdowns.

FRIDAY NIGHT

Oklahoma A. and M. over Drake, Villanova over Miami, Detroit over Wichita, West Virginia over George Washington, College of the Pacific over Denver, Hawaii over Fresno State.

SATURDAY

EAST—Cornell over Syracuse, Northwestern over Navy, Fordham over Yale, Harvard over Columbia, Boston U. over Duquesne, Holy Cross over Brown, New Hampshire over Rhode Island State, Carnegie Tec hover Bethany, Colgate over Western Reserve.

Amherst over Champlain, Vermont over Maine, Tufts over Northeastern U., Ohio Wesleyan over Connecticut, Williams over Rochester, Lafayette over Scranton, Tulsa over Georgetown.

MIDWEST—Ohio State over Pittsburgh, Minnesota over Nebraska, Illinois over Wisconsin, Iowa over Indiana, Marquette over Kansas State, Bowling Green over Bradley, Kansas over Colorado, Iowa State over Iowa Teachers.

SOUTH — Vanderbilt over Alabama, Wake Forest over William and Mary, Mississippi State over Baylor, Mississippi over Boston College, Georgia Tech over Florida, Virginia over VPI, Washington and Lee over The Citadel, VMI over Richmond, Tulane over Louisiana College, Clemson over North Carolina State, Auburn over Southeastern Louisiana.

SOUTHWEST—Texas Christian over Arkansas, Rice over Louisiana State, Oklahoma over Texas A. & M., Houston over Trinity, Texas Western over Idaho.

FAR WEST—Southern California over Washington State, Stanford over Oregon State, Wyoming over Colorado A. and M., Hardin-Simmons over Arizona, Utah over Brigham Young, Utah State over Montana State.

SUNDAY

San Francisco over Nevada, St. Mary's over Loyola (Calif.).

'Foolish' to Pick Maryland to Win

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

FOOTBALL WRITERS who pick Maryland to up end unbeaten Michigan State tomorrow are "foolish," Coach Jim Tatum, of Maryland, says.

On the eve of his team's departure for the big battle at East Lansing Saturday, Tatum said: "Our only hope is to hold the score down."

When told that football writers representing nationwide press services had selected the Terps to win, Tatum exclaimed:

"I don't say we don't have a chance because every team has a chance against any team, but any writer who picks us to beat Michigan State is foolish."

Tatum pooh-poohed the theory that the Spartans may suffer a letdown for Maryland after their sensational 14-7 triumph over Michigan last Saturday.

"If they were suffering any let-down, the newspapers have surely gotten them back up again with all their talk about a letdown," he sighed.

Tatum said he was happy to be playing the nation's No. 2 team (Michigan State was ranked No. 2 in Monday's Associated Press poll).

"We are not going to be overawed," he added. "They have a better football team because they have better punting, better kickoff men, better passing and better running. Our uniforms are as good as theirs, but I think that's the only place where we're even. They've got a much better ball club than they had last year."

Reminded that his team, too, is improved over last year when the Terps held Michigan State to a 14-7 victory, Tatum said:

"That's true, but they've improved more than we have."

The big coach added that he would not only be the happiest man in the world if the Marylanders socked the Spartans, "but I'd be the most surprised and I'm not easily surprised."

Stretch Running Bernie Moose Captures Bowie Feature

Bill Bennings

DEAR FOLKS:

Apprentice Anthony Russo, who applied for a three-months extension of his apprentice allowance, received word his application has been denied. He was idle for that length of time but due to illness and not injuries. While we are waiting for Maryland to install the consolation double, holders of the Danger Girl-Scotch Sand tickets got only their $2 back when the second horses were scratched. Magnet, second to the pincher opening day, will not be in action here Saturday, the W. P. Taylor star having been shipped to Garden State. A local handicapper was asked by a lady friend, "I guess you watch so many races that you see horses in your sleep," he replied, "lady, I see them in your sleep."

Frank Bone Rides Three Winners

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

BOWIE, Oct. 5—Frank Bone, the Nation's third leading rider in number of winners, struck the stride expected of him today. The youngster, who has done most of his saddle work in the Middle West, turned in three winners and made the daily double a personal proposition.

Bone, however, failed in the day's feature, the Bowie Purse. He had to be satisfied with third position when G. S. Gladdney's Bernie Moose, foaled and raised at Charles Town where he made his debut, took the sprint by a length margin.

P. A. Sullivan's Double Nip was second with H. W. Shaffer's Milldale, with Bone up, third in the field of nine. The race's big disappointment was the showing of the Pentagon Stable's Chloe. The Reaping Reward filly, installed the favorite, showed the dullest kind of effort.

In the test, exclusively for 3-year-olds, Bernie Moose was clocked in 1:12 4-5 for the six furlongs over a fast track. Despite ideal racing weather, only 6124 fans turned out. Those who backed Bernie Moose, received a $7.80 win mutuel.

The Washington-owned Blue Rocket carried the colors of S. H. Rogers out in front most of the way, followed by the East View Stable's Rose Bouquet. However, both weakened in the stretch and it was strictly a come-from-behind finish with Bernie Moose, handled by Apprentice Augustino Calalano, showing the most punch.

Bone's daily double paid $18.40 on the combination of 4 and 6. He took Mrs. L. A. Whiteley's Dainger Girl to the top early in the first race and kept her there, the 7-year-old mare paying a $7.40 mutual.

He came back in the second race to bring H. W. Weeclootie from well back in the pack to win going away on the outside of the field. Backers of the Cold Stream gelding took down $7.20 on their straight bets.

Bone had to wait until the sixth race for his third success. Trainer J. B. Bond boosted him aboard Bobanet Stable's Attention Mark. The Baltimore-owned 3-year-old came on to win with speed in reserve to the tune of a $5.60 mutuel.

Boudreau May Go to Chisox

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 5 (AP).—Is Lou Boudreau, popular manager of the Cleveland Indians, Chicago-bound at last?

The question, first broached a year ago when Bill Veeck came close to trading Boudreau to the White Sox, and revived again last June when Lou again was offered to the same club, may be answered within the next two weeks.

The Sox will be without a manager after next week when the board of directors meet in Chicago and officially hand current Skipper John (Red) Corriden his release. Sox officials are mum on the matter, but it was learned that they already have decided to replace the 63-year-old Corriden, who took over the reins in mid-season.

That move will pave the way for one of two men under consideration to get the job. Top priority will go to Boudreau, if available. The other candidate held in high esteem is Paul Richards, current manager of the Seattle Raineers in the Pacific Coast League.

It is hard to pin either the Indians or White Sox down to a definite statement regarding Boudreau.

NTS Tackles Gonzaga

In the second game on its play as-you-go football schedule, National Training School's team meets Gonzaga High today 3:30 p. m. at N. T. S.

A month ago, in a change of policy, N. T. S. merged its Negro and white teams, and then saw its eight scheduled white school opponents cancel their dates.

Since then, N. T. S. Athletic Director Joe Bunsa has been on the phone trying to book games. A week ago, Mount Vernon High's "B" team from Alexandria suddenly okayed a meeting of the two teams, and N. T. S. came out ahead, 33-0.

St. Mary's High of Annapolis yesterday said it will play N. T. S. a week from today at Annapolis, and Bunsa is also endeavoring to get a game with Mount Vernon's varsity.

Gonzaga goes into today's game with a 1-1 record. The Eagles beat Montgomery Blair, 6-0, and lost to Anacostia, 34-0.

Mrs. Melvin Rose's 76 Wins at Indian Spring

Mrs. Melvin Rose's 105-29—76 won first low net prize in a ladies' golf tournament yesterday at Indian Spring Country Club. Mrs. Eli Manuel and Mrs. Virginia Scheu tied for second low net, Mrs. Manuel with 100-20—80 and Mrs. Scheu with 113-33—80.

Guest prize was won by Mrs. Jules Friedensen of Woodmont with 98-20—78.

G. W. Host To Hopewell High Tonight

By Bill Gilbert

Wilson's Green Tigers, unspectacular in their 26-7 opening game victory over Fairfax and defeated twice since, meet McKinley Tech in the feature Interhigh League game at 3:15 p. m. today at Wilson.

For the Trainers, it is the first league game after two victories and a 4-0 loss to Washington-Lee High of Arlington. Coach Ed Solomon will rely on three good backs, John Wege, Richie Gaskell and Snookie Kernan, to make the Trainers' league start a winning one.

In two other interhigh games, Eastern plays at Roosevelt and Bell meets Anacostia at Anacostia. Both games start at 3:15 p. m.

In an 8 p. m. game, George Washington High of Alexandria, with a 3-0 record, takes on Hopewell, Virginia State champion, at G. W. Hopewell has won 14 straight games, starting with its last game in 1948 and is led by Johnny Dean, 195-pound 6-foot, 2-inch T formation quarterback.

Two Fairfax County rivals, the Mount Vernon Majors and Falls Church, meet at 8 p. m. at Mount Vernon. The Majors, using the split T, have won all three of their starts while Falls Church has dropped three straight.

Wege and Gaskell paced Tech to a 20-6 triumph over Episcopal last week. Wege scored one touchdown and passed to two others. Gaskell caught one of those payoff passes from Wege.

Wilson Coach Joe Carlo, still hopeful of a successful defense of the Tigers Interhigh championship despite a 13-0 loss to Western last week, is banking on Backs Gary Quinn and Pete Chaconas to snap Wilson out of its slump.

Fisherman's Angle

Dont' Try Trolling If Bay Is Smooth—It's Unproductive

By Ralph Murdock

FISHING experience has taught us one thing—good trolling is seldom achieved when the day is smooth as a mill pond This condition prevailed when anglers Fordie Walter, Ed Ferrell, Wilson Ford and yours truly picked Solomons Island for our piscatorial endeavors.

A slight ripple in the morning gave us a good start when 20 stripers were bagged. But in the afternoon the water leveled off to the stage where you could see a lone alewive when it surfaced a quarter of a mile away.

Not until late afternoon did we regain our stride when 41 more rockfish and one speckled trout was added. Our skipper was Orville Davis and a good one, too. The boat was the "Miss Shirley," queen of the Leon Langley fleet.

Fish hook extractions was the order of the day when Dr. Merton Goode, Dr. Ben Williamowski, Dr. Dave Kiel, Dr. William Binder, Dr. Harry Gaulblum (all local dentists), Dr. James Folsom, (the latter an M. D.), Fred Kolker, Benjamin Rubin, Herb Himmelfarb and Milton Silverman went fishing out of Lewes, Delaware.

The 10 anglers fished from 6:30 a. m. until 8:30 p. m. under the able guidance of Capt. Harry Parsons. Their catch consisted of 65 porgies, 12 sea bass, 2 albacore (9 pounds each), 7 bonita, 12 bluefish and 7 school tuna.

Here are some small boat anglers who fished the Holland Point area: Robert Appleton, Arlington, Va., 19 rockfish; Frank Nichols, 1 sea bass and 12 spot; Milton Howes, 25 spot; Victor Newton, 42 spot, and William Hodge, 10 spot. The latter fishermen were from the District.

William A. Roberts proved that fishing at night pays good dividends. Leaving Deale, Md., at 1:30 a. m., the Silver Spring angler nabbed 22 trout, 5 bluefish and 12 white perch. Roberts fished from his Cruisealong inside Holland Point.

Weekend Suggestions:

ROCKFISH—The whoppers are off Holland Point Black buoy. Trolling with 6 to 8-ounce sinkers with large spoons should entice 'em. Limit sizes here.

PANSIZE ROCKFISH—Solomon's Island area appears best. These stripers invariably are located close to the shore lines in shallow water. Size 3/0 Lusby lures should do the job—and good.

BLUEFISH—Eastern bay area and Cedar Point Light, off Solomon's Island are top spots. We prefer a number one Nungesser spoon for this species—exceptionally hard to guess.

SPOT — Point Lookout area and Sharp's Light are the right spots. A catch of 290 made at the latter location during the week.

Now's the Season for Oven Magic

Casseroles Come Into Their Own

By Lucia Brown

EARTHENWARE OR HEATPROOF glass . . . round, square, or shaped like a fish . . . the casserole's a godsend to the smart cook.

It makes it simple to prepare your main dish ahead of time, saves last-minute scurrying around when you have guests. It keeps food hot long after its trip from stove to table. And, most important of all, casseroles can taste so good and look so festive.

They're particularly fine for informal entertaining—buffet suppers, luncheons, even picnics. Wrap a good hot casserole in a batch of newspapers and it will stay hot until you reach your picnic if it's not too far away.

IN THIS CONNECTION, maybe you'd like to try Spaghetti Capri, a hot picnic treat for a crisp autumn day. It's a sophisticated meal-in-a-dish, but combines happily with cabbage slaw. Take some along in a glass jar. Take French bread, too, cut in sections and spread with garlic butter or margarine before you leave home. Fresh fruit will complete your menu nicely.

SPAGHETTI CAPRI

1/3 cup salad oil
2 cups raw cauliflower, cut in flowerettes
6 raw brussels sprouts, quartered
1½ cups diced raw carrots
⅓ cup coarsely chopped onion
1 14-ounce bottle catsup
½ cup white table wine
1 tablespoon wine vinegar
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
3 whole cloves
¼ teaspoon crushed peppercorns
1 bay leaf
2 7-ounce cans grated tuna
1 3-ounce bottle stuffed green olives and liquid
1 8-ounce can sliced mushrooms and liquid
1/3 cup sliced, sweet pickles
1 pound spaghetti, cooked

Heat oil in large skillet. Simmer vegetables in oil until slightly tender but still crisp. Mix in well the remaining ingredients, except spaghetti, and simmer 5 minutes, stirring occasionally. Combine with hot cooked spaghetti and turn into large casserole. Heat in moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) for 20 to 30 minutes. If desired, sprinkle with grated cheese. Serves 8 to 10 persons.

* * *

CHICKEN IS THE BASIS for another tempting casserole. This one's made with canned corn, mushroom soup, and part of a stewed chicken. For an at-home meal, serve glazed sweet potatoes and hot rolls with it. Top off the meal with vanilla ice cream with strawberry sauce.

CHICKEN DE LUXE

1 4- to 5-pound stewing chicken
1 medium-sized onion
½ cup sliced celery
1 bay leaf
2 teaspoons salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons parsley sprigs
1½ quarts hot water
¼ cup flour
¼ cup fat
1 12-ounce can whole kernel corn
1 can condensed mushroom soup

Cut chicken in pieces and slice onion. Combine with seasonings in large kettle, add water, cover and simmer (don't boil) 2½ to 3 hours, or until chicken is tender. Remove from liquid and select 4 or 5 meaty pieces. (Save remaining chicken to make creamed chicken at a later meal.)

Combine flour with a little salt and pepper in a paper bag. Dredge chicken by placing two pieces in bag at a time and shaking. Melt fat in skillet, brown chicken in it. Put corn into casserole and place chicken on top, pressing it into the corn. Cover with soup, place cover on casserole and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees) 45 minutes. Makes 4 to 5 servings.

* * *

THE POPULARITY OF CURRY powder, that spicy Indian condiment, is rapidly rising in the United States. If you like this interesting flavor—or crave an introduction to it—try this casserole.

SHRIMP CURRY AU GRATIN

½ cup finely diced onion
½ cup diced celery
6 tablespoons flour
1½ teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon curry powder
⅛ teaspoon ginger
1 teaspoon sugar
3 cups milk, scalded
1½ pounds shrimp, cooked and cleaned
3 tablespoons lemon juice
1 cup grated cheese
4 cups boiled rice

Melt butter. Add onions and celery and cook until tender, while stirring. Blend in flour, salt, curry powder, ginger, and sugar. Gradually add hot milk, while stirring, and cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Add shrimp, lemon juice, and half of the cheese. Heat through. Turn into individual casseroles containing rice and sprinkle with remaining grated cheese. Broil to melt cheese. This recipe serves six.

* * *

WITH THE "R" months now firmly entrenched, it's time to eat oysters. They, too, are a natural for casserole cookery. A delicious version of the popular escalloped oysters follows:

OYSTERS AU GRATIN

1 pint oysters
6 slices buttered toast
2 eggs, beaten
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
⅛ teaspoon paprika
½ cup milk
1 cup grated cheese

Trim crusts from bread. Cut each slice into quarters. Combine beaten eggs, seasonings, and milk. Arrange layer of bread in buttered casserole, cover with layer of oysters. Sprinkle with grated cheese. Repeat layer; pour milk mixture over contents of dish, and cover with grated cheese. Place casserole in pan of hot water. Bake in moderate oven 350 degrees Fahrenheit for 30 minutes or until brown. This recipe serves six.

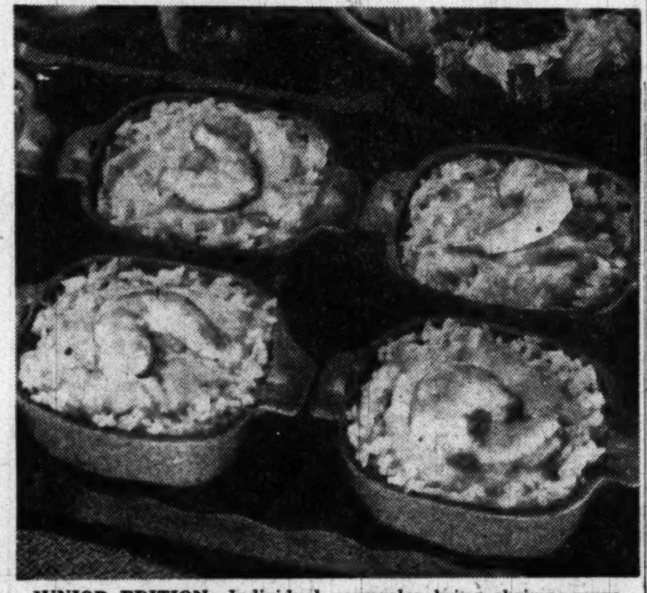
A SKILLET CASSEROLE of sauerkraut and frankfurters topped with apple halves is a hearty meal to hold back the chill of an autumn evening. It's a quick matter to make it because most of the ingredients come in cans.

SAUERKRAUT FRANKFURTER SKILLET

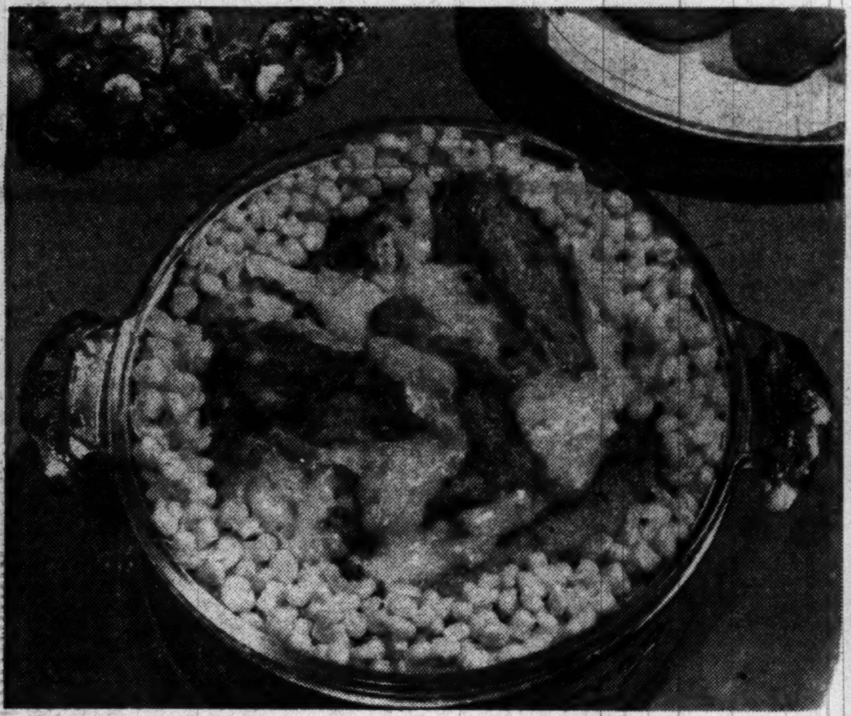
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 tart apples, cored and halved
1 No. 2 can sauerkraut
1 12-ounce can frankfurters
2 teaspoons sugar

Melt butter in skillet. Place apples cut side down and brown. Remove from skillet. Spread sauerkraut evenly in skillet. Add frankfurters. Place apples cut side up on sauerkraut. Sprinkle with sugar. Cover tightly and simmer until apples are tender, about 15 minutes. This makes four servings.

FRANK AND APPLE CASSEROLE—If you're a frank-and-sauerkraut fancier, you'll enjoy them casserole style accompanied by baked apple halves



JUNIOR EDITION—Individual casseroles bring shrimp curry to the table au gratin style. Green salad goes well with it



CHICKEN A CORN — This ca serole puts th South in your mout in a wonderful way

College Co-Ed Beats Bushes for Help in Winning Heart of Fine Serious Upper Classman Who Seems Indifferent to Girls, Due to Unhappy Love in Past

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am much interested in a certain boy who is a year ahead of me in college. He is a good student, well liked; and he is interested in music, art, world affairs and social service,—all interests similar to mine. But unfortunately he is indifferent to girls, including me. He is friendly with girls, but he doesn't date.

After sitting next to him in class for half a semester, and talking with him several times in the library, I got up courage to ask him to a dormitory dance last Spring. Although he had a previous engagement, he arranged to come and we had a good time. He really enjoyed himself, but he hasn't dated me since. He isn't good looking, but he is so fine and decent that you forget his looks; and I like him more than I can say. I doubt that I shall ever again meet anyone as fine as he.

Only recently I learned that a close friend of mine comes from Bud's home town. I asked her why he doesn't date and she said he'd liked a girl in high school who was very unfaithful to him. Evidently this hurt him a lot, as he was very fond of her. My friend assures me he isn't engaged. I am returning to college soon and I don't want to date any boy but Bud. I am planning to break off with a boy who has asked me to go steady.

Perhaps it is foolish to deprive myself of dates I could have, but I want to be free until I know Bud's intentions. And I can't really like other boys anyway, until I know my chances with Bud. If he were to tell me he hates me, I would be cured; but it's the "not knowing" that bothers me. I dream about him, have nightmares, etc., and I fear the suspense may hurt my studies. I have to make good grades because I'm in college on a scholarship.

In desperation I went to a girl friend's brother last week and asked him what I should do. He said honesty is the best policy, and that I should walk right up to Bud, tell him how I feel, and ask him if he dislikes me. I feel that would be a radical step, but something has to be done. Is there wisdom in his advice? Or can you tell me how to forget Bud? He graduates next Spring.

C. C.

DEAR C. C.: The time isn't ripe to jump down Bud's throat with a probing question about his feeling for you. Last Spring, or when you last saw him, he was still in love with the fickle jade in his home town, I think. That is why he didn't translate your dance invitation into a series of dates, after having had good fun in your company.

It strikes me that Bud is a very good sort, a steady fellow who doesn't use sex for escapist purposes, as unstable men are apt to do if confronted by a love-smitten girl when they're feeling discouraged about life. or unsure of themselves, or angry at a two-timing sweetheart, or such-like. Perhaps the girl back home has hurt Bud a lot, by cheating on his devotion; but it isn't uncommon for that kind of teasing to intensify the constancy of a fine decent lad, until such time as he outgrows the trial and passes on to a higher grade of feminine companionship.

If you aspire to win Bud's love—which is a reasonable ambition if he's not engaged—my advice is to stick to the line you started last year. Don't put your cards on the table face up. But do make the most of every opportunity you can naturally contrive, to express interest in his personality and partiality for his company. When you have an opening to ask a man to a party, try him again, and don't wilt if he refuses now and then. Tell him jokingly he works too hard and ought to give the co-eds a break.

Keep smiling and stay in the swim while testing your chances with Bud. Don't deprive yourself of other dates while stalking him. It is masculine instinct to back away from the wallflower's approach, and equally masculine to appreciate attentions from a girl whom other men like. There's no need to go steady with anyone, but you should go out occasionally, because there's no other way of giving graceful proof that you aren't a "desperation" case.

Just as Bud has been fascinated by his giddy flame, so do all men enjoy a girl who seems to enjoy life with a variety of friends of both sexes. And they recoil from maidens who "feel intensely." So don't wear your heart on your sleeve for the man you want, nor drop out of group activities to tag after him.

Your Figure, Madame

By Ida Jean Kain

UNHAPPILY, FROM the fashion viewpoint, there are six hip muscles to spread. This area is bounded by the gluteus maximus, the gluteus medius and the gluteus minimus . . . and they come in pairs.

The large fleshy muscle at the back of the hip is the maximus, rightly termed. The medius is a short, thick muscle rounding the side of the hip . . . often too rounding; and the minimus is a smaller muscle lying just beneath. With so many muscles to lose tone and bulk out, hips are a real figure hazard. And sitting does nothing to keep the muscles in tone.

Movement: Raise the right leg as high as comfortable and slightly back . . . have knee stiff and toes pointed. Lower. Repeat a dozen times, then change sides and raise and lower the left leg.

Movement: Flex the right knee vigorously toward chest. Then with a swinging motion, straighten the leg backward, and hold for a second. Holding in that extended position is toning. Bend knee to chest again, then straighten leg as you swing back with left leg.

Finish with a circular tone. There is more action than at first suspected.

Movement: The action is to describe a circle, moving the legs slowly . . . first separate legs on floor; then raise legs from floor, still keeping them apart, and hold this position for a few seconds; while legs are still off floor, bring them together and again hold for a second; lower legs to floor . . . rest. Repeat the circle—legs apart, up, together, down. Repeat entire exercise three times.

Harriman House Now Back in the Family

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

It must be a source of some satisfaction to Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, one-time American Minister to Norway, to have a Harriman again in Uplands, her former home.

The house on Foxhall rd., with its broad terraces and sweeping view of the city, had a succession of distinguished tenants before Mrs. Harriman finally let it go. The Albert Deweys, Sir John Balfour of the British Embassy, and more recently, Mrs. Perle Mesta, have been occupants over a period of years.

Mrs. Harriman's distant cousin, Averell Harriman, President Truman's special assistant, has taken Uplands now. Mrs. Averell Harriman, who crossed on the Liberte, the ship that brought Minister Mesta back to the United States, is expected in town the end of the week.

Mrs. Borden Harriman—Daisy to her friends—is now happily at home in her new and smaller house on 26th st., Georgetown, and you can catch a glimpse of the modern exterior and flowering garden in the current Ladies Home Journal. There's a picture of Mrs. Harriman, too, seated in her drawing room, the walls hung with mellow old portraits and a brand new television console having a prominent part in the decor.

ARRIVALS:

Interesting visitors in town from Great Britain are Sir William Lawther and Sir Patrick and Lady Dollan, who lunched with the British Ambassador and Lady Franks on Wednesday.

Sir William, president of the National Union of Mine Workers, is also a member of the Trades Union Congress, General Council. He's proud of the fact that he has risen from the pits where he first went to work at the age of 12, earning 40 cents a day for 10 hours' toil. In his spare time he attended night school. And in the course of his career became the Labor Member of Parliament (from 1929 to 1930) from Barnard Castle in Durham.

Sir Patrick was in this country in 1939 as the guest of the State of New York, to study local government and political organizations. He's now Scottish editor of the Daily Herald and was once Lord Provost of Glasgow.

BARONESS VON SCHOEN, who has just returned from Europe, is busily organizing the two sessions of the Capital Speaking Classes which are to open October 10 and 12 at the Wardman Park Hotel. Mrs. Hugh Butler, founder of the classes, is coming on from California this fall to look in on the sessions.

Mrs. Hester Beall Provenson, professor of public speaking at Maryland University, teaches the classes. Anyone who is interested is welcome as guest on the opening days, October 10 and 12.

MRS. JOHN W. STAGGERS has recently returned to her home, Oaklands, near Laurel, Md., after a trip around the world. She left Seoul, Korea, just a few days before the invasion, after visiting her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Harold W. Lady and their children, Don and Diana. Mr. Lady, American economic adviser to President Syngman Rhee of Korea, has been in Seoul since December, 1948. He is now assisting the Korean government from headquarters in Japan. He is the son of Dr. and Mrs. George Lady of Washington.

Women in the Food Industry

Soup Speaks an International Language

(This is the eighth in a series of Friday features written by women in the American food industry.)

By Lila M. Jones

IN THE INTERNATIONAL language of good eating, soup speaks a tongue common to all people. America is a land of many soups. Some were made of newly discovered native products and are characteristic of the whole country. Others were Old World soups adapted to the food grown in certain localities by cooks of many different cultures.

Probably the most typically American of our soups is cream of tomato. The tomato was found growing on this continent by Spanish conquistadores. It was taken to Europe at a botanical novelty, but came back to America to gain Nation-wide popularity as a savory, nutritious food. One of Jefferson's cooks at Monticello was widely known for her rosy tomato bisque. And a Neapolitan-American painter, Michele Corne, spread its fame in New England.

"Peas porridge in the pot, nine days old" stems from the old New England custom of cooking a kettle of bean soup in the wintertime and hanging it outside to cool. After nine days of ripening and freezing this lump of porridge was tied, along with a hatchet, to the side of the sleigh when country folk went to town. If a meal was needed on the way, the folks hacked off a lump, built a fire, and supped on the hearty bean soup.

THROUGHOUT THE Middle West vegetable soup was a wintertime favorite with folks down on the farm. From the root cellar in the hillside, the farmer's wife dug turnips, potatoes, cabbage and parsnips. Tomatoes were brought in from the spring house where they had been left to ripen when the frost began to nip them.

Then, in a big iron kettle on back of the wood stove, these vegetables were simmered with the shank bone of beef and a piece of lean. Such a soup, with fresh homemade bread and butter, and pitchers of cold milk often made the farm family's supper meal.

Chicken noodle soup was an American heritage the length and breadth of the land. Pioneers of almost every background brought some version of this recipe from the old country. So whenever they could, frontier families tried to take West a few setting hens to start a flock. Soon, in log cabins, sod huts and adobe homesteads, pots were bubbling with rich golden broth, thick homemade noodles, and a bouquet of herbs from the garden to lend magic savor to the stock.

THEN A NEW GENERATION came along, a generation in a hurry. Mrs. America no longer had time for all that plucking, cleaning and pot watching. The old iron soup kettle was banished to the attic. But, said the H. J. Heinz Co., American soups are too good to forget. So they combed the country for the best recipes, tasted and tested them with patient skill, until they had restored the soups of our forefathers. Now Mrs. America selects her favorite soups, condensed and packed in cans, from the grocer's shelves. Homemakers have found this a quick, thrifty way to make everything from sauces to salads extra nourishing and delicious. These recipes for soup cookery have been specially prepared and tested for you by the home economists of the H. J. Heinz Co. Try them, won't you?

ALL SET to turn a soup into salad is Lila Jones, head home economist for H. J. Heinz Company. In the accompanying article, Miss Jones gives her recipe for delicious vegetable aspic made with canned tomato soup A former assistant food editor of "American Home Magazine," Miss Jones is a graduate of Syracuse University and was at one time a member of the Good Housekeeping Institute. During the war she was in the Army as a hospital dietician, seeing overseas service in this capacity

Harvest Time Eating Good—But Expensive

THE HARVESTS ARE IN and the eating is good—albeit expensive—this October. A wide variety of colorful products from orchard, field and dairy gladdens the eye on a stroll through the market.

To keep your purse equally happy, bear in mind the Department of Agriculture's list of most plentiful foods as you buy. Here's the way it goes this month:

CHEESE leads as one of October's best buys in "protective" foods, and above-average yields of cabbage, onions and both white and sweet potatoes make them outstanding offerings.

APPLES AND CRANBERRIES are two Northeast natives that will prove their worth again and again to autumn meal-planners. The cranberry crop is a record one this year, with stocks of canned cranberries and sauce generous, too. Incidentally, next week is National Cranberry Week.

POULTRY will be the meat headliner for October. Fryers and broilers continue in plentiful supply, while stewing hens from farm flocks will be coming to market in heavy volume. Smaller size eggs provide real food bargains in this field. Rounding out the October plentifuls are dry beans, fish, butter, honey and peanut butter.

SPOTS loom large on the local scene this week—Norfolk spots. The catch is large and the fish fat and sweet. Other abundant fish are porgies, bluefish and seat trout. Frozen swordfish steaks from Japan and Peru are being featured in some stores. Shrimp prices have dropped at wholesale, but oysters remain high.

Met Queens and Housewives

GFWC Head Home From Tour

By Norma Lanum

WOMEN OF SWITZERLAND want to end their country's stand of neutrality and ally themselves with other freedom-loving nations, according to Mrs. Hiram Houghton of Red Oak, Iowa, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

The club executive reported yesterday on her five-week tour of Europe made with 39 other representatives from the club federation.

Swiss women including members of the International Council of Women, told Mrs. Houghton that they, more than the men, finally realize the time has come for Switzerland to "drop its neutral attitude."

THIS DESIRE AMONG the Swiss clubwomen for alliance with other democracies is attributed partly, according to Mrs. Houghton, to the General Federation's policy favoring compulsory military training. The Swiss believe it was their own compulsory military training that has kept them out of war thus far, she explained.

But among the German women whom she met, Mrs. Houghton found a distinct fear of armament and mobilization. This doesn't mean they wouldn't fight to defend themselves against communism, she added. They're merely afraid of building another aggressive army of their own.

Mrs. Houghton visited nine countries and met with women of all walks of life—all the way from queens to simple housewives. Although she says her most important job was getting acquainted over tea cups with the average European woman, her most memorable experience was her visit with Queen Juliana of the Netherlands.

SHE WAS HAVING coffee with the Queen in her drawing room. When the cream and sugar was passed the Queen remarked, "I have a hard time with flesh." Mrs. Houghton, a short, plump grandmother, replied, "So do I."

"You know, I go up and down," confessed the Queen.

"So do I."

"My husband likes me better when I'm down."

"So does mine," Mrs. Houghton agreed.

"She's a perfectly wonderful Queen," Mrs. Houghton exclaimed, "and I'll never forget her."

AT LEAST TWO NEW major federation projects were born out of the European tour.

First, the American clubwomen will help support the Pestalozzi Children's Village in Trogen, Switzerland. It's an international orphanage for 200 homeless children of 14 nationalities. The children live in groups of 15 in separate houses in the village, each with a foster mother and father.

MANY STUDENTS have come from Russia or Soviet satellite countries and do not want to return to their home countries. The group of women takes these students into their homes for weekends and gives occasional parties and dances for them.

The touring United States clubwomen also did a lot of shopping in Europe. "We really helped the dollar gap tremendously," their president reported. Mrs. Houghton was wearing a Dior necklace her fellow clubwomen gave her.

The women flew back from London Tuesday, all very tired and anxious to rejoin their families. "The remarkable thing is," Mrs. Houghton commented, "we all came home friends."

THE PRESIDENT returns to her banker husband in Red Oak October 10. She'll spend three days with him and then fly back to Washington, where she'll maintain her residence at the Club Federation headquarters on N st. Her husband will join her in the winter.

A MEETING OF THE welfare department of the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs was held at the home of Mrs. E. Morgan Pryse, 4613 Albemarle st. nw., yesterday. Mrs. Pryse, who is the new chairman of the department, announced chairmen for the various divisions. Before the meeting Mrs. Pryse entertained at a buffet supper.

In addition to the members of her own department, Mrs. Stuart E. Womeldorph, president of the federation; Mrs. Ernest W. Howard, the new chairman of legislation, and Mrs. Jason Waterman, also of the federation, were present.

Slacks and Sport Shirt Become Formal Dress When in Saudi Arabia

DEAR ANNE:

Two of us (men) are going to Saudi Arabia to work for two years. Can you tell us something about clothes (what to wear); about liquor (is it available?); about everyday materials, i. e., soap, shaving articles, cards, hair tonics, etc? We want to buy what we need there rather than take a load with us, wherever possible. You are and always have been "an ever-present help in time of trouble." I think we would consult you before getting married (again). J. W. H., Alexandria, Va.

Thanks for the tribute, but the question about Saudi Arabia is as tough a one as we care to take on. We had to call in a consultant on this, as a matter of fact—a man who has just returned from a couple of years in Saudi Arabia. He advises:

Khakis are generally worn by men working outdoors in that country, while office workers are usually attired in slacks and sports shirts or regular shirts. However, on the west coast—in Jidda, for instance—most construction employes, including office workers, wear khaki.

Slacks and sports shirts are the usual evening wear. Formal dress for both eastern and western coast communities is white trousers, white sports shirt, black cummerbund, black shoes and socks. Each person needs at least one business suit, however.

The climate of Jidda on the west coast and Dhahran on the east coast are very different, he adds. This is particularly true in winter, when topcoats are necessary in Dhahran area.

Our advisor suggests that you ask your employer for advice about what supplies to take along. If you're going to work for an American oil company, construction company, etc., you will undoubtedly find canteens provided by the firm. In these you can purchase practically all the necessary articles for daily living—food, toiletries, clothing, even cigarettes and liquor.

DEAR ANNE:

A piece of blue-painted furniture was rubbed against my mahogany radio. Can you tell me how to remove this paint without ruining the finish of the radio? V. L., Arlington, Va.

Try gentler methods first, V. L. Rub the spot with a piece of cheesecloth, just barely wet with turpentine. Rub steadily as long as any paint seems to be coming off. (The finish is probably lacquer and will be unaffected by the turpentine. However, rub cautiously, concentrating on the paint only.) If cheesecloth and turpentine won't turn the trick, use very fine steel wool (size 4-0) in the same way.

DEAR ANNE:

Although North Arlington, to which I have recently moved, boasts fine groceries and other domestic conveniences, I have been unable to find equal facilities supplying food for the spirit. In short, where in this fine community can I find a lending library stocked with current books? There must be one, surely. I should add that I am familiar with the Arlington County Public Library system, which is excellent, but not always able to supply what I'm looking for among quite recent publications. Will appreciate any tips you can provide on rental libraries.

Mrs. F. R. D., Clarendon.

DEAR ANNE:

I have a Harris tweed coat that is now worn out at the elbows, but otherwise in good condition. I thought perhaps I could have it repaired by having a leather square sewn on at the elbow. Do you know where in Washington I could buy this kind of leather?

JOHN J. de PORRY, Fairfax, Va.

There's a shop at 1028 14th st. nw., that has the leather and will cut it for you to suit your needs.

PETUNIA!

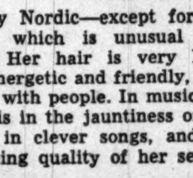
On the Town



By Georganne Williamson

THIS is the word from a Nordic girl from the lake country of Indiana: "Washington is kind of rural, isn't it?"

She's C. J. Holly, singer at the King Cole Room and a sparkling coed still, although she graduated from Northwestern several years ago. C. J. had been explaining that she wanted to stay in Washington longer to see the town.

She likes the King Cole Room especially. It's easy to believe; most singers want to appear there. The dark blue, narrow cocktail room, where the singer perches on the bar and uses a hand mike, has a closely knit, enthusiastic following.

The room has a personality, and most of the girls that Vin Gallagher signs also have a personality. They've fresh good looks and good voices, they're young, serious about their careers and have a way with people.

C. J., for instance, was a Conover model in New York for a year. But she's always wanted to sing, and, "finally, I thought—I will. So I started auditioning, and got a job within a week."

She had sung before at Northwestern's music school, where she was a piano major.

Of Swedish, Norwegian and German extraction, C. J. seems typically Nordic—except for her beauty, which is unusual anywhere. Her hair is very light. She's energetic and friendly, likes to visit with people. In music, her charm is in the jauntiness of her humor in clever songs, and the convincing quality of her serious ones.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 7, IS NEWSPAPERBOY DAY . . .

THE PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD COMPANY
GENERAL OFFICE

M. W. CLEMENT
CHAIRMAN

BROAD STREET STATION BUILDING
1617 PENNSYLVANIA BOULEVARD
PHILADELPHIA 4, PA.

Today the nation salutes its youngest business men - the newspaperboys whose faithful execution of their chosen task has helped make the American people the best informed in the world.

These boys deserve our respect and good wishes. They perform an essential community service that is too often taken for granted by the people they serve. Most important, they demonstrate at an early age their faith in the American way of life and their eagerness to prepare themselves for a responsible place in the adult world of tomorrow.

This nation grew to greatness on the philosophy of achievement through free enterprise. The principal requirements for success have been ambition, initiative, enterprise and industry. In these troubled times when so many among the old as well as the young are being confused by conflicting ideas of human values and human rights, it is most encouraging to know that each year a half million American boys are voluntarily assuming responsibility and undertaking to learn the fundamentals of the American way of doing business.

The healthy habits that our newspaperboys are acquiring will be invaluable to them in later life. They are learning to be prompt, courteous, self-reliant and dependable. They are learning the great importance of thrift. When you look them in the eye they remind you of happy younger days of your own.

During the war years they were among the nation's foremost salesmen of War Savings Stamps and they have continued this outstanding volunteer work for their country by supporting the peacetime Savings Bonds Drives. During the last Independence Drive 192,184 newspaperboys delivered 15 million leaflets urging their customers to buy Savings Bonds. And they invest their own earnings in Savings Bonds through their Thrift Clubs and other savings programs sponsored by their newspapers, thus developing the habit of saving regularly for their independence.

It makes us most happy to have the opportunity to extend greetings and best wishes to America's industrious young newspaperboys on this National Newspaperboy Day, 1950.

M W Clement
Chairman

The U. S. Treasury Department is proud to join Mr. Clement and the newspapers of the nation in honoring America's newspaperboys. These sincere, enterprising young men are learning to accept responsibility—learning the importance of punctuality, dependability and service in dealing with others—and they are developing the valuable character building habits of courtesy and thrift. By their conscientious performance of their important part-time job and their regular investment of their savings in U. S. Savings Bonds they are demonstrating their ambition to grow into responsible citizens of our free society.

Experiment Linda

Good Grooming Proof of Being Grown-Up

Sixth day of Linda's beauty series

By Ann Lawrence

HOW TO CONVINCE your parents, in one easy lesson, that you are no longer a child but are approaching young ladyhood: Discard any haphazard grooming habits that you may have had as a child and take more than just a casual interest in keeping yourself neat and fresh at all times.

Your daily bath, for instance. Never skip it. No lick-and-a-promise routine, either. Get in that shower, or tub, as you prefer, and really go to work. Use a good stiff brush on your back to keep the pores clean and free of blackheads, to slough off the dead skin and prevent red pimples from forming. Don't neglect to scrub your feet, as well, to keep away rough skin and callous spots. Your elbows can stand a workout with the brush, too. And need we mention the back of your neck?

Now is the time when you must start to use a deodorant. Glandular changes are taking place in your body, increasing the flow of perspiration. You may either check this flow and its accompanying unpleasant odors as it accumulates on the body, or simply eliminate the odor without stopping perspiration.

STOPPING THE perspiration in localized spots . . . such as underarms . . . is perfectly safe, for all you do is to divert moisture from this area and nature distributes it more evenly over the entire body to evaporate through other pores.

Do remember that your daily bath is not enough to check displeasing body odors. Perspiration starts again the minute you step from the tub. And you'll find that you perspire more at times when you are emotionally disturbed, either happily or unhappily. So do play safe and make a deodorant part of your good grooming habits.

You're old enough now to learn the pleasures of bath powder and cologne or toilet water. Dusting powder after your bath actually helps to keep skin from chapping. Use it liberally, choosing a light, floral scent and when you're dressed for a party, spray on a cologne to match. Linda's choice is a refreshingly sweet floral bouquet . . . a real blend of garden flowers . . . with just enough spicy scent to make it lively.

YOUR LINGERIE NEEDS a sudsing after each wearing. So do your socks. 'Tis a simple matter to drop them in the foam and let them soak while you soak in the tub.

And watch out for those little things that make the difference between a young child and a young lady . . . a clean handkerchief, no hairs or flakes of dandruff on your shoulders, well-polished shoes, no run-down heels.

It's a lot of trouble to be a young lady, isn't it? But it's worth it.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

'No Parking' Does Not Apply to Trucks

M. S. Hunter of 3445 38th st. nw. complains that a traffic officer who was industriously tagging student cars in the vicinity of the G. W. Law School building ignored another type of violation.

The students called the officer's attention to trucks which had been in a similar "No Parking" zone for hours, but the policeman told them the trucks were not violating the law, "and if you don't like what I say, you can go swear out a warrant against them."

The cop's impatience was probably based on the fact that motorists just don't bother to learn the District Traffic Code as they should.

The law says that you're "parked" the moment your wheels stop turning, and that you may not park in "No Parking" zones except to pick up and discharge passengers. You may NOT sit at the wheel and wait for somebody.

Trucks and other commercial vehicles, on the other hand, may stop in "No Parking" areas while they are actually engaged in loading and unloading. But they may not load or unload during times specified on "No Stopping" signs.

Capt. Henry H. Heflin of the Third Precinct tells me that there has been no complaint that the trucks in question have been impeding traffic, but he's going to have his men watch the area anyhow. "They're permitted to load and unload," he points out, "but not to park there indefinitely as a matter of convenience. We'll take a look and see which it is."

KID STUFF

Charles Howard Dutkin, 8-year-old resident of Presidential Gardens, Alexandria, Va., was recently elected vice president of his third grade class at George Mason School.

Young Charlie's father, Howard, was duly impressed with the news, and immediately began calling his son "Mr. Vice President" at every opportunity. Charlie stood the formality as long as he could and the other night he finally decided that being famous isn't all it's cracked up to be.

"I don't want to be a vice president any more, Daddy," he announced plaintively. "I just want to be a little boy again—just plain Charlie."

And if the truth were known, Veep Barkley has probably felt the same way at times.

STAMP OF DISAPPROVAL

C. S. Shapiro of 5605 Suitland rd. se. wants to know why neighborhood postoffices do not carry stocks of those pretty commemorative stamps, and one must go all the way down to the Ben Franklin Station at 12th and the Avenue to buy them.

Postmaster Roy M. North puts the stamp of disapproval on the idea. He says:

"Most stamp collectors know that the Philatelic Agency at the Ben Franklin Postoffice carries a complete stock of commemoratives, and are used to buying them there. Branch postoffices can get commemoratives on request, but don't stock them because there's too little demand to justify putting in the large and varied supply that would be necessary."

P. S.: He didn't say a word about the Post Office economy drive.

LAWYERS WON'T HELP

"If they really want to get Humphrey Pennyworth out from behind the Iron Curtain," writes M. O. Coleman of 520 7th st. se., "they ought to send my wife after him. His jailers wouldn't dare say no to her."

Personally, I think that when the Russkies find out how much Humphrey eats, they'll be glad to get rid of him.

Effects of False Peace Are Feared

By Drew Pearson

Secretary of State Acheson has been urging President Truman to deliver a fireside chat warning the Nation against falling for the Russian peace offensive.

Acheson

Acheson fears that victory in Korea will lull Americans into forgetting that Western Europe is still Russia's No. 1 objective, and that to let down now would prove disastrous later. Therefore, he has suggested the President give a blunt talk to the people, perhaps on Columbus Day, and in this way explode Moscow's peace talk.

Acheson wants the President to point out that Russia still has 75 divisions in Eastern Germany—15 of them armored—and is now stockpiling huge quantities of food and raw materials—something you do only when you are preparing for war.

Rhymester Lucas

Most people don't know that when the Senator from Illinois gets fed up with long, drawn-out Senate debates he scribbles lyrics. Here is one he turned out when the Senate was tied up in a table-thumping debate on oil:

"Who is this old man oil
That raises hell in committee toil?
Open the door and let him in,

"Remember boys—he's a wily old cuss.
He looks like 'Hit' and acts like 'Muss';

Korean Costs

Most people don't realize that the cost of the Korean war to the taxpayers has been increased by about five billion dollars, because of two factors: 1. Unpatriotic war manufacturers and raw-material dealers have hiked prices; 2. President Truman, though given ample power by Congress, has failed to invoke price controls.

As a result, it now costs the armed services more for their needs, without exception, than they paid before the Korean outbreak. Probably the most shameful is the sudden increase in the price of medical and surgical goods, urgently needed to save lives in Korea. The Army must now pay $220 for an instrument and medicine cabinet that cost only $195 before the Korean war. The price of glycerin, a medical compound in demand in military hospitals, has shot up 114 percent. Even rubber surgical gloves for operating on wounded soldiers have increased in price from 17 to 22 cents per pair.

The high-octane aviation fuel that keeps our planes flying over Korea costs 30 percent more than before the war. At the same time, fuel oil has shot up 54 percent. The Air Force is also paying as high as 175 percent more for resistors, actuators and other electronic spares for aircraft, and the Navy is paying 10 to 12 percent more for ship parts than these same items cost before K-Day.

Business as Usual

In addition to paying 62 percent more for zinc, the Army and Navy had to get tough before they could even buy enough zinc for batteries urgently needed in Korea. Assistant Secretary of the Army Alexander and Assistant Secretary of the Navy Koehler personally had to put pressure on the zinc companies in order to get military orders filled.

Believe it or not, these companies—Anaconda, Sullivan Mining, American Smelting & Refining, and American Zinc Co. of Illinois—wanted to take care of their civilian clients first rather than risk losing business. Now the same companies are protesting against supplying zinc for the Nation's strategic stockpile.

The basic commodities used in the manufacture of military items were the first to skyrocket after Korea. Crude rubber shot up 162 percent, with some British companies charging as high as 300 percent above the pre-Korean price. The price of wool, so essential for the freezing Korean winter, increased 61 percent. Cotton for summer uniforms shot up 50 percent. Steel scrap, which sold for $24 a ton in Philadelphia before the Korean war, now costs $38 per ton. The National Lead Co. also increased the price of antimony, necessary for the hardening of steel, 3½ cents a pound.

Here are a few other comparisons between the prices the armed forces paid before and after the Korean war began: radio receivers up from $550 to $910 a set; radiak training sets, $84.90 to $289; shipping boxes, 82 cents to $1.24 each; 5-gallon gasoline drums, $1.79 to $1.98 each; khaki trousers, 74 cents to 84 cents a pair; adhesive tape, 26 cents to 30 cents a roll; tires, $16.14 to $20.46 each; fire hose, $20.64 to $23.10 per 50 feet; ground interrogator, $1842 to $2303 each.

These are typical of the higher prices the armed services are paying for everything. Yet President Truman, with a price control act on his desk, giving him ample power, has steadfastly refused to move.
